St. Dorothy School's Adopt-A-Family

GLENDOURA - The sixth, seventh and eighth grade students of St. Dorothy School in Glendora participated in the Adopt- A-Family program which was created by Father Fleming of the Archdiocese in Los Angeles. They are celebrating 25 years of serving the poor and needy families in the skid row area. Twenty Five years ago Father Fleming saw a need to provide a Christmas for the less fortunate, starting with 50 families. This year 503 families were "adopted." St. Dorothy School has participated in this service program for the last seven years. The junior high students, with the help from the Catholic Club of Glendora High School and the Xtreme Teen group of St. Dorothy Church, adopted six families. In November, a family profile was provided for each family and the students were able to shop for items on their 'wish list'. They were put in groups and worked together to come up with the money to purchase the gifts, some using their own money they received for birthdays, chores and allowances. The students held a 'wrap party' and all the gifts were then delivered, from the Cathedral of the Angels in Los Angeles, on December 19th to the waiting families. This is a wonderful experience for the students in which they help the truly needy families have a wonderful Christmas.

The Santa Fe Railway Comes Live Again At The Lordsburg Taphouse And Grill

LA VERNE - Have a beer and gaze at the Los Angeles Railroad Heritage Foundation's latest "Satellite" display of archive photographs and beautiful O-scale models of the Santa Fe trains that once ran along the mainline tracks from Chicago to Los Angeles just minutes from the Lordsburg Taphouse and Grill.

The Los Angeles Railroad Heritage Foundation is dedicated to preserving the history and displaying the future of railroading and public rail transportation in the greater Los Angeles basin.

The miniature models and photographs in the "Satellite" display are from the Los Angeles Railroad Heritage Foundation's extensive collections. Nine other "Satellites" located throughout the Los Angeles basin display subjects that depict a particular region or historical site. These locations include Philippe French Dip Restaurant in downtown Los Angeles; the Old Spaghetti Factory restaurants in Fullerton, Riverside, and Newport Beach; the Pacific Electric Lofts at 5th and Main Streets in downtown Los Angeles; the Anaheim Packing House at Anaheim Boulevard & Santa Ana Street in Anaheim; and the Belmont Apartments (former site of the Pacific Electric Toluca Yard) in downtown Los Angeles.

The Sweepstakes Trophy went to the Singpoli Groups float with its fire-breathing dragon.

150,000 blossoms, an extraordinarily high percentage by Rose Parade standards.

Charles Meier, the float designer, known for his ability to create a colorful blend of flowers, is not new to float building having been involved in the business for over 20 years. He formed Paradiso within the past four years and has increased the number of floats each year. This year he built floats for the Singpoli Group, Donate Life, Los Angeles Lakers, and the Public Broadcasting Service. All were award winners!

The festivities leading up to the New Year's Day Celebration with the parade and Rose Bowl Game present many unique ways to create excitement for the New Year. Many, young and old, from far and near, enjoy getting their hands sticky with glue as they assist in the float decorating and some have done so for years and will be back next year. Others just prefer to observe the process and see the magic take place at some of the float decorating venues. Another unique opportunity is to get up close and personal with the equestrian units at the Equestfest. One of the most overlooked festivities is the Bandfest held at the Pasadena City College in the Jackie Robinson Stadium. There you can see most of the Rose Parade bands perform the award-winning field shows that led to their selection. The festivities for the 2016 Rose Parade are a part of history, but now is the time to start making plans to "Find Your Adventure" to enjoy all the fun surrounding the next Tournament of Roses.

Pizza Delivery Man Arrested After Fight With Customer

By George Ogden

COVINA - On Saturday, January 2, at approximately 11:35 PM, Covina police officers responded to a stabbing that just occurred in the 600 block of North mangrove in the city of Covina. Once officers arrived at the scene, they found that a male resident of the location had been stabbed during an altercation with the Domino's pizza deliveryman because of a long delay of the pizza delivery to that location.

Michael Charles Parker

Paramedics were called to the scene and treated the unidentified 20-year-old man for lacerations to his wrist and neck areas. He was transported to a trauma center in critical but stable condition and it is believed that these injuries are not life-threatening.

The event started when an argument over a late pizza escalated into fight and a stabbing when a pizza delivery driver slashed the customer late Saturday, police said. The suspect, 31-year-old Michael Charles Parker of Glendora, left the scene after the altercation and returned back to the Domino's pizza store in Covina. This is where the Covina Police Department responded and made contact with the suspect and then arrested him. He was charged with the stabbing attack. Bail was set at $30,000. The suspect was released on a $30,000 bail with a pending court appearance for March 21.

Huff Introduces Legislation to Ban Powdered Alcohol in CA

SACRAMENTO - Senate Minority Leader Emeritus Bob Huff (R-San Dimas) started the first week of the 2016 legislative session by introducing a new bill, SB 819, which will place a ban on the sale of powdered alcohol in California. The product, also known as Palcohol, is a freeze dried version of alcohol which comes in a small pouch and is the equivalent to a shot of alcohol. The crystallized formula becomes a cocktail once mixed with water. The product has already been banned in 27 other states.

"This substance is yet another drug that we should be concerned about and for good reason," said Senator Huff. "Some are predicting Palcohol will become the 'Kool-Aid of teenage binge drinking,' and this is a concern I agree with."

The ease of this substance presents an array of potential health problems in California as it can be snorted, added to energy drinks, slipped to unknowing recipients, or even added to beverages already containing alcohol in an attempt to create a dangerously potent concoction.

"Powdered alcohol is the most insidious, youth-attractive alcohol product to come along since alcohol energy drinks," stated Richard Zaldivar, a spokesperson for California Alcohol Policy Alliance and Alcohol Justice. "The misuse danger, especially to young people, cannot be overstated."

"Powdered alcohol is a product that is ripe for abuse, and can easily be marketed to children," said Kat DeBurgh, MPH, Executive Director of the Health Officers Association of California. "From a public health point of view, powdered alcohol is unsafe for California's communities. The time to act is now."

Because this new drug can be easily sold and transferred, this is a prime product for abuse by children and teenagers. Alcohol-related harm to California youth can present itself in several ways including death, injuries, assaults, sexual violence, unsafe sex, suicide attempts, and academic problems.

"Alcohol is already abused by underage kids and drinking responsibly is a challenge for many adults," said Senator Huff. "Adding powdered alcohol to this potent mix is akin to squirting gasoline on a wildfire. This is a problem that California does not need."

SB 819 will now wait for its first policy hearing in coming months. Senator Huff is pleased the issue has achieved bipartisan support and is working closely with Assemblymember Jacqui Irwin (D-Thousand Oaks) on a companion measure that has been introduced in the Assembly, AB 1554.

Proposals for Homeless Funding Must Protect Local Government Options

LOSANGELES COUNTY— Supervisor Michael D. Antonovich said that any proposal to alter or redirect the use of MHSA (Mental Health Services Act) funds should enhance the County's existing efforts to address the homeless problem.

"Funding must follow treatment needs," said Supervisor Antonovich. "Greater flexibility means supporting effective local programs including hospitalization and family participation in recovery as well as extending supportive housing services to those leaving restrictive environments, such as jails and hospitals, and ensuring their successful reentry into the community."

State Senate President Pro

Tem Kevin DeLeon is anticipated to announce a proposal which may alter the way MHSA funding is directed to local government.

Since the enactment of Proposition 63 (the Mental Health Services Act), which provides additional money to support mental health services, Los Angeles County has maximized available funds to expand critical mental health services.

"Local governments across the state have the hands-on knowledge and experience about how to address the homeless problems in their counties and cities," he added. "Any directives by the state could undermine this expansion effort and delay progress being made in their own unique communities. Local governments must carefully review any proposals put forth by the Senate's President Pro Tem -- particularly those that may impact the use of local funding."

MHSA funds currently support the county's top priorities which include homelessness programs, jail diversion, child welfare, psychiatric urgent care centers, outreach, engagement, treatment, housing and ongoing mental health services through Laura's Law. In February, the Los Angeles County Department of Mental Health will present an $84 million proposal to the Board for further expansion of these critical services.

The City Of Azusa's Human Relations Commission Presents The Movie "Selma"

AZUSA - On Sunday, January 17 at 2:00 P.M., the City of Azusa and its Human Relations Commission will host the annual Hands Across Azusa event in the Azusa City Hall Auditorium at 213 E. Foothill Boulevard. This year, the event will feature the free showing of the movie "Selma," featuring David Oyelowo who in 2014 received a Golden Globe Award nomination for best actor in a drama for his portrayal of Martin Luther King, Jr. "Selma" is rated PG-13 and focuses on the actions of Martin Luther King Jr. during the civil rights march from Selma to Montgomery to secure voting rights for African Americans.

The event will also feature the reading of Dr. King's famous "I Have a Dream Speech" as well as a performance of heartfelt hymns and songs from the civil rights movement performed by the students of Christbridge Academy.

The event is on Sunday, January 17 at 2:00 P.M. in the Azusa Civic Auditorium, 213 E. Foothill Blvd.

Typically this event is held on the front lawns of City Hall;

however, because we are anticipating the highly publicized series of storms - more commonly known as El Nino, the even has been moved indoors.

The Azusa Civic Auditorium, at 213 E. Foothill, has always been the contingency location should we get an unexpected downpour throughout the many years that the event has been held on the front lawns of city hall. This year, the real possibility that we will have rain or that the lawns will be saturated has made the decision to move indoors essential.

Statewide Mattress Recycling Program Debuts In California

California becomes the second state in the nation with a statewide recycling program for used mattresses and box springs. The program, known as Bye Bye Mattress, allows California residents to drop-off used mattresses at participating collection sites and recycling facilities for free. California residents can find their nearest participating collection site or recycling facility at www.byebyemattress.com.

Bye Bye Mattress is administered by the Mattress Recycling Council (MRC), a non-profit organization created by the mattress industry to develop and manage the recycling program mandated by law in 2013.

"This program is a cost-effective solution to a long-term problem," said Ryan Trainer, president of MRC. "We developed California's program to increase the recycling of used mattress materials by leveraging the existing waste collection infrastructure."

To date, the Program has over 40 solid waste facilities in the program as designated collection locations and many more are expected to join in early 2016. MRC is also working with mattress retailers, hotels, universities, healthcare facilities and other public and private entities in California to divert mattresses from the solid waste stream.

"The implementation of this mattress recycling program means discarded mattresses will be recycled in an environmentally sound manner, creating California jobs and resulting in cost savings for municipalities," said Scott Smithline, director of CalRecycle. "This program mirrors similar programs being implemented in other states. We recognize the Mattress Recycling Council for their commitment to the success of this program and their leadership in getting this law passed."

The program is funded through an $11 recycling fee that is collected when a mattress or box spring is sold to California consumers. Consumers will notice this fee as a separate line item on their receipt.

The fee is used to pay for transporting and recycling the discarded mattresses.

Numerous stakeholders in the program, including government officials, municipal and solid waste representatives and the mattress industry, will gather in Sacramento and Los Angeles in early January to commemorate the launch of the program.

Recycling Facts

Each year, 35 to 40 million new mattresses and box springs are sold in the United States, and at least 15 to 20 million used mattresses and box springs are discarded.

More than 80% of a used mattress' components can be recycled —the metal springs, foam, wood and fibers — and made into new useful products.

For example:

- The steel springs are recycled as metal scrap and can be melted and used to make new appliances, building materials and other steel products.

- The foam can be turned into carpet underlayment or animal bed padding.

- The wooden frames can be shredded to produce landscaping mulch.

- The cotton and other fiber can be used in industrial oil filters and other textile applications.

The Recycling Process

Most recyclers currently use the following process to dismantle a mattress:

- The top mattress layer (including the outer fabric) is cut, peeled and separated from the mattress' interior materials (which can include fiber, polyurethane or latex foam and steel springs).

- The interior materials are pulled apart and separated by type.

- Foam, fiber and other soft commodities are baled and compressed for transport to scrap dealers or companies that will consume them to make new products.

- Metal springs from mattresses and box springs are extracted and sent to scrap recyclers that will sell them to steel mills and foundries.

- Wood is chipped or shredded.

Murder Suspect in Rowland Heights Mass Shooting Is Released

By George Ogden

ROWLAND HEIGHTS - on December 31, New Year's Eve, a bizarre set of events ended with the deaths of four people in Rowland Heights. One man was arrested, who was identified as Christopher John Morey, 33, was taken into custody by the Los Angeles County Sheriff's Department. At the time, his bail was set at $1 million. However, on Saturday, January 2, Morey was released from custody around 4:30 PM.

The Los Angeles County Sheriff's Department will be turning over all the information to the Los Angeles County District Attorney's Office to see if they will be filing murder charges or some other charges on Morey.

Around 8:30 PM, Los Angeles County Sheriff's Department received calls of a shooting in the 2200 block of Batson Avenue in Rowland Heights. Responding deputies found four people down from gunshot wounds. Paramedics were called to the scene and all the victims were pronounced dead.

The four victims were identified as, Betty Jean Morey, 54, who is Christopher Morey's mother, who was bedridden. Linda Patricia Merrell, 48, who is Christopher Morey's girlfriend along with a house guest Ernesto Calzadilla, 27 of Rowland Heights who just happened to be there at the wrong time.

Christopher's father, Michael John Morey, 54, was said to be the shooter of the three other victims. Christopher got into a fight with his father after the shooting over the weapon. Christopher was able to secure the weapon and turned it on his father and killed him. This gave cause for the deputies to arrest Christopher Morey on murder charges as he was able to overpower his father and disarmed him, thus neutralizing any other threats.

It appears the father and the girlfriend had gotten into some type of argument over the use of a washing machine. The father became enraged and armed himself and started shooting everybody that was there including his wife. At some point Christopher was able to overpower his father and secure the weapon, and then he killed his father. Being that Christopher Morey is the only witness, there was concerns as to the legitimacy of his story. Investigators were looking into the possibility that Christopher Morey may have been the only shooter. Investigators collected evidence at the scene for their investigation.

Neighbors in the area have stated that that particular home and the people that live there were always arguing. Deputies and investigators believe alcohol was in use at the time of the shooting as there were all kinds of beer bottles all over the property inside and out. Deputies have responded to that home on numerous occasions, as many two dozen times or more over the last three years.

The investigation continues. Anyone with information is asked to contact the Sheriff's Homicide Bureau at 323-890-5500.

Assemblywoman Chang Cracks Down on Fake Celebrity Autographs

SACRAMENTO – Assemblywoman Ling Ling Chang (R-Diamond Bar) today announced the introduction of legislation to protect consumers who are the victims of forged autographs. In some memorabilia markets, forged signatures make up over half of the supply – making it all too easy for consumers to be defrauded. Assembly Bill 1570 will put safeguards in place as well as provide civil recourse for buyers of autographs.

"The amount of fake autographs on the market is astonishing," said Assemblywoman Chang. "It's really sad when you see people, especially children, become the victims of forgeries. The illegal practice is really out of control!"

PSA/DNA, JSA, and other professional authenticators evaluate hundreds of thousands of autographs annually worldwide, and often determine the signatures to be forged. According to industry experts, the rejection rate can reach over 50% of submitted items for the more prominent names, including Neil Armstrong, Michael Jackson, and others. For example, experts estimate that only 94 percent of all autographed Beatles memorabilia is forged, as are 76 percent of Marilyn Monroe and Elvis Presley collectibles.

In the last twenty years, the FBI instituted two major investigations uncovering millions in forged sports, entertainment and historical autographed memorabilia – both cases involved operations in California. During the most recent investigation, the FBI estimated forged memorabilia "comprises between $500,000,000 and $900,000,000" of the overall billion dollar market.

AB 1570 will require dealers of any signed memorabilia to provide a certificate of authenticity upon sale of the autograph. The bill will also provide victims of forged memorabilia with civil recourse including ten times the amount of actual damages. Current law already protects consumers in the narrow case of sports related memorabilia.

Assemblyman Mike Gatto Introduces Legislation to Protect Children from Identity Theft

SACRAMENTO – Assemblyman Mike Gatto (D-Glendale) introduced legislation that would allow parents to protect their child and family from identity theft. AB 1580 allows a parent to freeze their child's credit with the three credit bureaus, preventing identity thieves from opening fraudulent credit accounts and ruining their credit at an early age.

so. After reporting on the dangers of identity theft, Watts decided to proactively protect her daughter against fraud by freezing her credit. However, she was led down a road of bureaucratic red tape that almost prevented her, and would prevent most parents, from protecting their children.

"As a parent of two young daughters, I understand why someone would go above and beyond to shield their child from harm," said Gatto. "AB 1580 is a common-sense proposal that provides parents the tools to protect their child's financial future."

Consumer-Investigative reporter Julie Watts from CBS affiliate KPIX in San Francisco reported about her attempts to freeze her own child's credit, but was refused by the credit bureaus because there was no state law mandating them to do

Until now, parents have only been able to freeze their child's credit after the child has been a victim of identity fraud. Since children do not have credit in the first place, giving their parents the option to freeze their credit at birth only makes sense. States such as Idaho, Texas, and Maryland have already successfully passed and implemented similar laws.

"It is time for California to step up and join the many states that have already passed similar legislation," said Gatto. "Parents will be able to sleep better at night knowing their child's identity is protected."

Huff Embraces "No Place Like Home" Initiative

Broad and Bi-Partisan Effort Aimed at Reducing Homelessness

SACRAMENTO - Senate

Minority Leader Emeritus Bob

ing his full support behind a broad and bi-partisan Senate effort to find effective methods to address the problem of homelessness in our local communities and explore new and innovative tactics to prevent it. Senator Huff appeared at a news conference earlier today in Los Angeles in support of the initiative with several other lawmakers, including Senate President pro-Tem Kevin de León.

Announcing a major effort like this in front of The Star Apartments on Skid Row in Los Angeles should demonstrate the depth of this problem and the resolve of lawmakers to address it with innovative strategies that haven't been pursued as strongly in the past," said Senator Huff. "It's a travesty that a state as rich as California, with the 8th largest economy in the world, is also home to the nation's largest homeless population.

It's estimated that the investment will result in 10,000 to 14,000 units of housing for the homeless.

The housing plan also contains a $200 million investment, over four years, to provide supportive housing in the short-term while permanent housing is built or renovated. It's estimated that this will produce about 4,000 units of short-term housing.

The Income Supports and Outreach component of the initiative would increase Supplemental Security Income (SSI)

and State Supplementary Payment (SSP) grants, both of which provide income supports for the aged, blind and disabled poor who cannot work. These increases will assist about 1.3

million low-income Californians, many of whom suffer from disabilities or are elderly.

"It's well known that rates of homelessness are much higher for Californians with disabilities who cannot work or the elderly," said Senator Huff. "Both

SSI and SSP are intended to help people live comfortable and productive lives, and we already know that a large portion of these grants goes toward housing."

The "No Place Like Home"

initiative will not increase taxes.

Under the plan revealed during today's news conference, the $2 billion revenue bond will be paid from Proposition 63 Mental Health Service Account

(MHSA) funds, which voters approved in 2004. Proposition

63 would be amended by the Legislature, which is permitted under the measure, to set aside

$135 million of annual revenues to pay off the $2 billion revenue bond.

Senator Huff is hopeful the initiative will be enacted by the State Legislature during 2016-

2017 budget negotiations in June.

The Gamble House Celebrates Milestone

Gamble Family Bequeaths House to the City of Pasadena and USC on January 14, 1966

PASADENA - January 14, 2016 marks the 50th Anniversary of the gift of the Gamble House from the Gamble family to the City of Pasadena and the University of Southern California. The Gamble House is the most complete and best-preserved example of American Arts and Crafts style architecture.

The house and furnishings were designed by famed architects Charles and Henry Greene in 1908 for David and Mary Gamble of the Procter & Gamble Company. The house, designated as a National Historic Landmark in 1978, is owned by the City of Pasadena and operated by the University of Southern California School of Architecture. The Gamble House is open for public, docent-led tours and for specialty tours and programs.

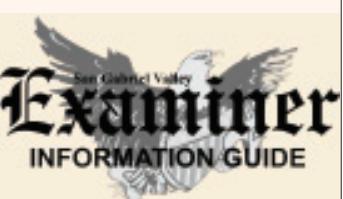

On January 14, 1966, members of the Gamble family, the City of Pasadena, and the University of Southern California signed a formal gift agreement, and in September of that year the doors of the Gamble House were opened to the public. In the half century since then, The Gamble House has become one of the most beloved premier historic sites in America.

A series of celebratory anniversary events will take place throughout September 2016 including an invitation only dinner for major donors; a fundraising reception to kick-off a new endowment campaign to raise funds to continue to protect the Gamble family's generous legacy gift to the public with another decade of conscientious preservation; a reception to recognize the contributions of Gamble House docents through the years; an Alumni Day Open House for former Gamble House Scholars in Residence and the USC School of Architecture; and a 50th Anniversary public celebration on Sunday, September 25, with self-paced tours and family-friendly activities and entertainment.

Visitors continue to visit, week in and week out, from around the world to marvel at the beauty imbedded in every square foot of The Gamble House. They come to experience what Charles Greene called "architecture as a fine art." Hailed by the American Institute of Architects as "formulators of a new and native architecture," Charles Sumner Greene (1868-1957) and Henry Mather Greene (1870-1954) designed houses and furnishings a century ago that established a new paradigm for the art of architecture in the United States. Drawing on the skills of outstanding craftsmen, as well as their own polytechnic training, formal architectural education, and natural artistic sensibilities, Greene and Greene created legendary living environments that were beautiful, functional and modern. Of their fully coordinated houses with interior furnishings, only the Gamble House survives intact.

What Happens When Your Body Can't Regulate Calcium?

Calcium is important for the development of strong bones and teeth.¹ But it also plays a role in other important functions in the body. For instance, calcium helps blood to clot and supports nerve function, as well as muscle contractions, releasing hormones, and maintaining a normal heartbeat.² If the body is unable to maintain the necessary levels of calcium in the blood (serum calcium), the consequences can be serious or even life-threatening.³

The parathyroid glands are small nodules located near the thyroid that produce parathyroid hormone, or PTH.⁴ This hormone regulates calcium and phosphorus levels in the blood.³ When levels of PTH are too low, it can lead to low levels of calcium and high levels of phosphate in the blood. In turn, this can cause a range of persistent physical, emotional and cognitive symptoms.³

Hypoparathyroidism

A rare disease called Hypoparathyroidism is characterized by low or absent endogenous PTH with low levels of calcium in the blood.⁵ Hypoparathyroidism can affect someone at any age, and an estimated 70,000 patients in the United States are living with the chronic disorder.⁶ Hypoparathyroidism most often occurs following surgery such as a thyroidectomy, a common procedure for patients with thyroid cancer during which all or most of the thyroid gland is removed.^{7,8} Less commonly, Hypoparathyroidism can also be caused by some autoimmune disorders, genetic risk factors, increased levels of iron, copper, or iodine in the parathyroid glands, or may simply be undetermined.⁷ More females appear to be diagnosed with hypoparathyroidism relative to males, with a 3:1 predilection.⁶

How is Hypoparathyroidism diagnosed?

Hypoparathyroidism can be diagnosed based on the identification of a patient's symptoms by conducting a review of a patient's medical history, a thorough physical exam, and specific laboratory tests. In some cases, genetic testing can be used to confirm a diagnosis.⁵

How is Hypoparathyroidism treated?

Symptoms of hypoparathyroidism are often managed with oral calcium and active vitamin D to raise calcium levels in the blood.⁹ For more information about available treatments for hypoparathyroidism, patients should consult their health care practitioner or endocrinologist. (NAPSI)

Who Is A Terrorist?

Terrorist and terrorism are among terms thrown around these days without any clear identification. A terrorist, loosely defined, is someone, or part of some group, who conducts deadly attacks on innocent civilians in order to terrorize them! The 9/11 2001 tragedy is a prime example. Certainly that horrible episode and others right up to the recent attacks in Paris and San Bernardino, qualify as "terrorism." Following the 9/11 tragedy, President George W. Bush coined the term, "the war on terror."

In recent days it has become commonplace to use the designation, "Islamic terrorism" as a summation of the series of more recent violent episodes. I wonder, however, if that appellation exhausts the meaning of the term. A while back a correspondent suggested that in the catalogue of terrorist attacks, every one was perpetrated by Muslims, and therefore Islamic terrorism is an apt designation. A candidate for the Presidency recently opined, "all Muslims are not terrorists, but all terrorists are Muslims."

But if a non-Muslim invades a facility shooting anyone inside or blowing up the building, is that not terrorism, whatever his ethnic or religious identification? Every few days in the United States there is such an attack, and as far as I know most of the attackers or "terrorists" were not Muslims. The chap who blew up the Oklahoma City building claimed to be a Bible-believing Christian.

In recent years we have witnessed a spate of terrorist attacks in America's schools and colleges, the most notable being the Newtown slaughter of a score of little children. The term "Islamic terrorist" could not be applied to most of these criminals. A month ago a middle-aged white American killed three people and wounded a half dozen others in a Colorado Planned Parenthood facility. On June 17, 2015 a non-Muslim killed nine members of a Bible study group in a Charleston, South Carolina church. Far more Americans have recently been gunned down in these terrorist attacks by non-Muslims, than have been gunned down by Muslim fanatics. One of these homegrown attacks happens in the United States almost every week.

But think about how the designation "terrorist" may have an even broader meaning. In the City of God, Saint Augustine tells the story of an encounter between Alexander the Great and a pirate captain caught on the high seas. Alexander says to the pirate, "How dare you molest the seas as a pirate?" But the pirate replies, "How dare you molest the whole world. I have a small boat so I am called a thief and a pirate. You have a great navy so you are called an emperor, and can call other men pirates." Try substituting "The United States" for "Alexander the Great", and "terrorist" for "pirate" and you may get a sense as to how much of the world, particularly the Islamic world, sees our invasion and destruction of Iraq and Afghanistan, as terrorism.

Explain why Palestinians with stones and a few knives are called terrorists, but the Israeli army with tanks and bombers are called patriots. This does not excuse those who use stones and knives as weapons of terror, it just expands the definition. One person's freedom fighter may be another person's terrorist.

Unless we examine our complicity in the destruction currently dominating the Near East, we may fail to answer or even ask a basic question, "why do they hate us?"

There is no question that they do hate us, and hatred produces terrible results. I'll be looking at that question next week. The "shock and awe" we wrought upon a nation that had not threatened us and did not even have weapons which might have produced a threat, planted the bitter fruit of violence which we must eat, seasoned with the deadly poison of national arrogance. That our only answer is to destroy ISIS, and with them the civilians in the areas it controls, only throws fuel on the fires of hatred.

There must be a better way, but no politician of either party dares even to suggest it.

So hatred and vengeance will rule and we will find ourselves even deeper in the swamp of war. 2016 promises to be no better in this regard than any previous year. Nations, as well as individuals, reap what they sow, and this harvest is drenched with the blood of men and women on both sides, and the tears of those who mourn them. Will Your Doctor Be Fired If He Tells You the Truth about a Serious Health Risk?

By Jane M. Orient, M.D.

A healing patient-physician relationship depends on mutual trust. Patients need to trust that their doctor is working for them. In the Oath of Hippocrates, doctors swear to prescribe "for the good of my patients," to the best of "my ability and judgment." Such a physician does not lie to patients or treat them in a way he believes will harm them. He does not reassure them that it is fine to do something he believes will lead to incurable disease, unhappiness, guilt, or early death.

But what if their physician is working for a hospital and knows that he'll lose his job or even his entire career if the employer is displeased? And what if the hospital lets insurers, government, or political advocacy groups control the message to patients?

The case of Dr. Paul Church should alarm patients everywhere. Dr. Church just lost his final appeal of his expulsion from Harvard-affiliated Beth Israel Deaconess Medical Center (BIDMC) in Boston. These days being expelled from any hospital medical staff for any reason can and probably will have a domino effect—loss of privileges at all other hospitals, removal from insurance panels, a report to the National Practitioner Data Bank that could foreclose all future employment opportunities, loss of board certification, and even loss of medical license.

Dr. Church, a urologist, had been on the medical staff for 28 years. Did anyone accuse him of incompetence? Did he throw a scalpel at a nurse? Was he impaired by alcohol or drug abuse? Did he humiliate, discriminate against, or harm anyone in any way? Did he make any statement that the hospital disputed as untrue?

NO, to all of the above. His record was exemplary.

The hospital clearly wants to make an example of him, to deter anyone else who might dare to act as he did. But not a very public example. There has been almost no news coverage. Usually, when a doctor gets booted from a hospital, the press is all over the story. People love to read about the comeuppance of a successful doctor. But not this time.

Apparently both BIDMC and the press are themselves afraid—of backlash from the public, in the case of the hospital, or of the anger of a powerful political constituency, in the case of the press.

So what was Dr. Church's heinous, unmentionable crime?

He told the truth—discreetly, through internal hospital communications channels. A truth that many on the hospital staff agreed with—silently.

He protested the hospital's pressuring its staff to support Gay Pride events. Uniformed members of BIDMC staff are pictured marching in the Gay Pride parade, along with people promoting sado-masochism, or displaying gear for bondage and domination, or showing children as sex objects.

Dr. Church stated that such hospital policy contradicted its mission to protect the public welfare and to promote healthy, moral choices. He challenged the hospital to be honest about the unhealthy consequences of homosexual behavior, and "respectful of the diversity of religious and moral views regarding homosexuality." His quotation of a few verses from the Bible might have ultimately been the unforgivable sin.

Unquestionably, men having sex with men, an activity that even has its own acronym now (MSM), have a much higher incidence of sexually transmitted diseases. Though AIDS is not the automatic death sentence it once was, infected individuals face a lifetime of costly, toxic drug treatment.

The CDC recently reported that homosexual men, lesbians, and bisexuals experience a much higher rate of sexual assault, including rape, by an intimate partner. Transgenders, vociferously insisting that they be considered normal, are simultaneously demanding insurance coverage for costly treatments, including lifelong hormone therapy.

Can your physician, without fear for his career, tell you the truth about the risks of your behavior? Only if it involves smoking or drug use or something other than sex. Doctors are supposed to affirm the notion that the only problems facing LGBT patients are caused by societal disapproval. This gag on physicians must be enforced by totalitarian methods because reality is so hard to deny.

And if your physician lies to you about one thing, can you trust him to tell the truth about anything?

California is Sinking

By Lois M. Shade
Former Mayor of Glendora

Remember years ago when we talked about the western half of California falling off into the ocean and the East San Gabriel Valley becoming ocean front property? Might not be so far from the truth.

U.S. Geologic Survey has recently reported land subsidence in California with particular concern about our Central Valley farm area. Land subsidence is defined as:

"...a gradual settling or sudden sinking of the Earth's surface owing to subsurface movement of earth materials. The principal causes are aquifer-system compaction ... " or over pumping of ground water exacerbated by the current drought. Sinking of the earth is occurring anywhere from 9 inches to a foot year in the San Joaquin Valley with serious concerns over sinking in western Sacramento Valley.

State Department of Water Resources reports since spring of 2008, ground water levels are at all-time lows and has issued a report to document and project future subsidence with some areas rated at high risk. Major concern: As the ground sinks there is and will be damage to infrastructure like the canals, roads, river banks and even private property that could end up costing billions of dollars to repair.

California Department of Food & Agriculture confirms the farmers are more and more reliant on groundwater as they drill more and deeper wells admitting some of those areas are in severe overdraft. Surface water shortages will reach nearly 8.7 million acre-feet forcing an estimated pumping of additional 6 million acre-feet and still leaving a shortfall. Water shortages have forced 542,000 acres to lay idle.

In 2015, California's agricultural economy will lose about $1.84 billion and 10,100 jobs with the Central Valley being hit the hardest. CDFA website has an interactive piece showing NASA satellite images contrasting the Sierra Nevada snowpack levels in March 2010 and 2015. Dramatic and affecting water availability.

We know from information provided from various sources, 80% of the California water available goes to agricultural use so we have a relatively inexpensive food supply. USDA reports California's 76,400 farms and ranches provide 1/3 of the nation's vegetables and 2/3 of the fruits and nuts.

• California ranks #1 in fruit production (grapes, strawberries, peaches, nectarines, avocados, raspberries, kiwifruit, olives, dates, and figs).

• California's tree nut production is the Nation's largest, supplying virtually all U.S. almonds, walnuts, and pistachios.

• California produces over 90% of U.S. lemons and more than 50% of U.S. tangerines.

• Vegetable production occurs throughout the U.S. with the largest acreage in California, accounting for 47% of the harvested area in 2014. During this period, California's share of total U.S. production for fresh-market and processed vegetables accounted for 60% and 73%, respectively. Top commodities produced in the State in 2014 in terms of volume were broccoli, carrots, celery, lettuce, and tomatoes.

• California is also the Nation's largest producer of melons, accounting for about one-third of annual U.S. volume.

Without California agriculture, what would we eat, at what cost and consider the impact on the state budget.

In 2014, Governor Brown requested a $7.12 billion bond proposal be placed on the ballot, ultimately passed by the voters, and supplemented with an additional $425 million from previous unused bond money to become known as Prop. 1. Among provisions were $2.7 billion for water storage projects, $810 million for competitive grants and loans for storage projects, and $325 million for flood management projects. With the rainy season coming in hard and fast, I certainly hope the Governor and legislature are creating those water reserves we need and would like to depend on in the future.

How About Those New Year's Resolutions?

George Ogden

That's just the way it is!

taking the trash to the curb. Now if that happens, that's your fault.

When the wife leaves for an extended visit someplace and is gone for a few days, she always demands that you wash the dishes. Yeah, yeah, right. Well she's gone for the whole weekend and it's party time. Now, before you know it, she's on her way home and you got a kitchen sink full of dishes. You have a number of options, this is where that dog comes in handy. Place all the plates and the bowls on the floor and I will guarantee that that dog will lick them clean. When he's done, simply put the dirty dishes away in the cabinet. Hopefully the wife won't catch this.

Give the old lady complements, this should keep you out of trouble. But watch how you phrase things. Don't say stuff like, I didn't know your butt was that big, but it sure looks nice. Or, you don't look all that fat today, are you finally on a diet? Although your intentions might have been good, you will soon realize you are in a lot of trouble.

So with all these New Year's resolutions that you made, sometimes they just don't really work out.

The Fed Takes The Wheel

For the first time in five years, the Fed is poised to have a bigger impact on the economy. In the first half of 2016 the economy may pretty much do what it was doing before the Fed started to tighten. However, the cumulative weight of several increases, probably in the second half of the year, will force the Fed to decide how aggressive they can remain. Now that the Fed has hiked, it's time to do what Yellen has implored us to do for the past year: Stop obsessing about liftoff and accept the modest path of rate increases.

When does an extraordinary policy end? The obvious answer is when policy makers end it.

Extraordinary also ends, however, when it lingers long enough to become ordinary. After seven years, there is nothing extraordinary about interest rates as low as they are now. When 30-yr fixed mortgage rates first fell below 4%, in 2012, it was shocking. Now, mortgage lending dries up whenever they rise above 4%.

Whether it stays that way depends on how the economy and inflation play out. If the economy produces significant job and income growth, lifting inflation with it, people should have no trouble adjusting to higher rates (which will seem inevitable and normal). If not, the Fed will never raise rates to 3.5% in this cycle.

THE GROWTH OUTLOOK

CONSUMER SPENDING is fading again as 2015 draws to a close. In fact, it slowed pretty consistently through the second half of the year. Nominal spending is falling a lot faster than real spending thanks to lower gas prices. But the fact that real spending growth is falling at all means consumers are saving most of the gas price windfall.

If it sounds familiar, it's because consumers did the same thing last year. But the saving rate fell last summer before rising again, suggesting increasing comfort with spending before this latest bout of thriftiness.

That leaves foreign trade as perhaps the biggest potential negative factor. As Yellen has pointed out, the dollar is a factor here, but so too is foreign demand. Both will have a significant effect on inflation in 2016 and 2017.

Wall Street expects the dollar to appreciate, while overseas demand for US-made goods remains weak. On balance, that means a drag on growth, but it could be a smaller drag than in 2015.

because the shrinking mining sector now has such a small share of capital spending, it can tumble at a double-digit pace with minimal impact.

HOUSING INVESTMENT is solid, contributing a few tenths to GDP every quarter, but not much more than that. Housing should remain solid in 2016, but may fade in 2017 if the Fed is as aggressive in their approach to monetary policy as Wall Street anticipates.

GOVERNMENT SPENDING will contribute about 0.5% to growth in 2016, a significant boost following a period of strict budget discipline which made government a perennial drag on growth after 2009. The recent omnibus spending compromise looks like an election year one-off, as deficit math screams for something-tax increases or entitlement reform-before deficit math blows out the budget gap before the end of the decade. Hilary Clinton is already campaigning on a promise of tax increases. Still, there are at least three fiscal quarters left to enjoy the contributions of other people spending your money.

Wall Street expects the dollar to appreciate, while overseas demand for US-made goods remains weak. On balance, that means a drag on growth, but it could be a smaller drag than in 2015.

INFLATION

In 2015, developments outside the US had a far bigger impact on inflation than domestic developments.

The same is likely to be true in 2016 and '17 as well, though what happens here will affect what happens there, too. In other words, Fed policy will affect US inflation, but may Economists still don't agree on why consumers are thrifty, but the ACA-induced healthcare revolution remains a compelling candidate, meaning spending may remain sluggish until mid-2016, just as it did this year.

extraordinary also ends, however, when it lingers long enough to become ordinary. After seven years, there is nothing extraordinary about interest rates as low as they are now. When 30-yr fixed mortgage rates first fell below 4%, in 2012, it was shocking. Now, mortgage lending dries up whenever they rise above 4%.

Whether it stays that way depends on how the economy and inflation play out. If the economy produces significant job and income growth, lifting inflation with it, people should have no trouble adjusting to higher rates (which will seem inevitable and normal). If not, the Fed will never raise rates to 3.5% in this cycle.

THE GROWTH OUTLOOK

CONSUMER SPENDING is fading again as 2015 draws to a close. In fact, it slowed pretty consistently through the second half of the year. Nominal spending is falling a lot faster than real spending thanks to lower gas prices. But the fact that real spending growth is falling at all means consumers are saving most of the gas price windfall.

If it sounds familiar, it's because consumers did the same thing last year. But the saving rate fell last summer before rising again, suggesting increasing comfort with spending before this latest bout of thriftiness.

That leaves foreign trade as perhaps the biggest potential negative factor. As Yellen has pointed out, the dollar is a factor here, but so too is foreign demand. Both will have a significant effect on inflation in 2016 and 2017.

Slauson Middle School Students Construct Domes, Launch Gliders during STEM Competition

AZUSA - More than 100 students from Azusa Unified's Slauson Middle School constructed multi-colored geodesic domes and launched hand-made gliders across Memorial Park Gym on Dec. 4 during a series of science, technology, engineering and math (STEM) competitions.

Great Minds in STEM Viva Technology Day paired seventh-graders in STEM and Advancement Via Individual Determination (AVID) programs with engineers from Northrop Grumman, the event's sponsor, and with college students majoring in STEM subjects. Students and mentors worked together to develop winning products.

"This incredible competition helped spark excitement among our students for STEM subjects, which in turn will help prepare them for their college journeys and challenges of today's technology-driven careers," Superintendent Dr. Linda Kaminski said.

Teams built geodesic domes from multi-colored straws, tape and platforms in the middle to see whose structure would sustain the most weight. They crafted gliders with wooden-stick bodies, Styrofoam-plate wings and rubber weights at their noses to see whose would soar the farthest.

The day's final challenge pushed teams to devise solutions to potential problems in the year 3000, drawing on assigned STEM fields, such as astrophysics, forensics and electrical engineering, to develop a prototype. Each team gave a 30-second presentation on its invention.

"This was an exciting opportunity for our students to apply their STEM knowledge to solve different challenges," Slauson Principal Linda McNary said. "They were also able to learn from and interact with college students and professionals in STEM fields, which will broaden their perspectives on the different paths they can embark on in their future."

Between the activities, college students and engineers talked to students about their career and college experiences. Slauson alumnus Sylvia Block, an engineer at Northrop Grumman, encouraged students to pursue their dreams.

"I went from dissecting guinea pigs in the seventh grade at Slauson to testing satellites and watching rockets launch as a professional," Block said. "It was a difficult journey to get through my studies and build my career, but if it's your dream, you can do it."

Teams earned Viva Dollars by winning challenges and exhibiting good behavior; the dollars became entries for a drawing to win iPod shuffles, drones and construction kits for remote control spider robots.

"Connecting with our community and local organizations helps us to provide a wide range of academic experiences for our students," Board of Education President Yolanda Rodriguez-Peña said. "It is so exciting to see the projects they're involved with and inspire them to continue studying within these in-demand career fields."

Staying Fit After 50 - In The New Year And Beyond

Two years ago, 66-year-old Barbara Scott weighed 208 pounds and wasn't happy with not only her appearance but her health. After giving up on other weight loss methods, Scott decided to customize her approach.

First, she began tracking her caloric intake every day; then, she layered on a fitness plan. She enrolled in the nation's leading fitness program designed for older Americans and started a five-day-a-week exercise regimen.

"I've lost 65 pounds and dramatically improved my overall health, well-being and quality of life," said Scott. "I truly believe I've added years to my life expectancy and I look forward to exercising until my 90s!"

If losing weight or simply getting more active is something you've been thinking about, the New Year is a great opportunity to start anew. To avoid resolution pitfalls and find long-term success like Scott, put a plan in place following the guide below.

1. Be Honest and Realistic. If you want to ensure lasting change, you must first assess your current fitness level and then implement reasonable goals to guide you on your way.

2. Be You. Whether a yogi, marathon runner or someone stepping into the gym for the first time, start with a fitness routine that works for you. SilverSneakers offers many different fitness options that help older Americans stay active and live their best life.

3. Find the Fun. Choosing activities that capture your attention is the fuel to keep you motivated. SilverSneakers' varied offerings allow you to tailor the program to your interests, whether that be a group fitness class, tennis, yoga or weight training.

4. Stick With It. You will inevitably hit bumps in the road when starting a new routine, but be persistent! Seek new friendships on your path to well-being—peers that will celebrate your successes and provide encouragement when you need it most.

"SilverSneakers Fitness has changed thousands of lives by engaging participants in physical activity, as well as creating more social connections and friendships," says Joy Powell, Chief Operating Officer Network Solutions, Healthways. "Members like Barbara Scott are the perfect example of how the program helps members maintain their lifestyle and realize overall well-being during retirement years."

More than 12 million people are eligible for the SilverSneakers Fitness benefit at no cost through leading Medicare Advantage health plans, Medicare Supplement carriers and group retiree plans. To see if you are eligible or to find a class nearby, visit www.SilverSneakers.com.

How One Veteran And His Family Found Support After An Injury

Service-related injuries have an effect that is felt by the entire family. Here's a look at one couple and how they coped.

One Family's Story

When Melissa Johnson and her husband, Sean, got married in 1995, Sean had already served in Operation Desert Storm and had been trained as a paramedic. He first enlisted in the U.S. Army at 17 and later would go on to do two more tours of duty.

It was during his third tour, Operation Iraqi Freedom, when he was hit by mortar fire. It left him with a traumatic brain injury (TBI), post-traumatic stress disorder (PTSD) and depression.

"The combination of ever-changing symptoms really made Sean's situation difficult," Melissa said. "We weren't getting answers from the doctors. Army medics weren't looking for the signs of traumatic brain injury back then and his condition went undiagnosed for two years. We were having a tough time getting benefits. It was an uphill battle—a continuing series of uphill battles."

It was also hard for friends and family to understand what was going on or how to help.

After experiencing increasing problems with his vision, Sean was declared legally blind in 2008. While he has a bit of usable remaining vision—enough to read text up close for a short time—he has lost the peripheral vision needed to travel safely. The damage to his brain hampers interpretation of information coming through his eyes.

Answers At Last

When Sean finally got connected with the Blinded Veterans Association (BVA) Field Service Officers at Hines Blind Rehabilitation Center, things began to turn around. "All of a sudden, people were providing us with information—we didn't have to go searching for it. We got connected with people and programs we'd never have been aware of at home in rural South Dakota," Melissa said. "It was really that first BVA convention—meeting people, hearing success stories—it was so empowering. That was where Sean found out about tandem cycling; it gave him so much hope. It started us in a new direction."

For Melissa, meeting other families that were dealing with similar issues was most rewarding. Spouses and family members are the support teams for recovering veterans. "Caregiver burnout is a serious problem," Melissa said.

"Young spouses may also be juggling with caring for young children and jobs. There's a lot we can learn from each other, and from older veterans and their families that have already successfully navigated the changes."

Melissa now serves as Secretary for the National BVA Auxiliary Board. "The BVA Auxiliary offers a lot of support to veterans and their families," Melissa said. "It is there to make sure the spouses, partners and children of blinded veterans have a place they can turn to with their questions and concerns."

"I believe BVA programs and outreach are absolutely critical to the recovery and healing of our blind veterans," she said. "It is essential for a veteran who is adjusting to blindness to connect with peers who understand what they're going through. The information, resources and guidance provided by BVA are invaluable."

Helping Older People to Maintain Independence

For most older adults, the ability to live independently is associated with the ability to drive. That's one reason the prospect of eventually "giving up the keys" can be a frightening one.

To help, the experts on aging at the National Association of Area Agencies on Aging (n4a) developed a brochure called "Before You Give Up the Keys: Create a Roadmap for Transportation Independence" that may lessen those fears by empowering older adults to evaluate their mobility needs, identify the transportation options in their community and develop a plan customized to their unique circumstances.

"A too-familiar scenario is that older adults wait until they're involved in some sort of emergency, like a traffic accident, before they really think about their driving ability and the other transportation options available to them in their community," said n4a CEO Sandy Markwood. "Our goal is to shed light on a critical issue that will likely affect most families with an older loved one who may need to limit or eliminate their driving, and to provide a catalyst for discussion, and hopefully, action," Markwood also noted.

The n4a represents America's national network of 623 Area Agencies on Aging (AAAs). It helps older adults and people with disabilities live with dignity and choices in their homes and communities for as long as possible.

To that end, it created the Eldercare Locator. This serves as an essential, trusted gateway to help older adults, caregivers and health professionals navigate the maze of aging programs and services, as well as to assist them in identifying and accessing the resources that match their needs best. The National Call Center operates five days a week from 9 a.m. to 8 p.m. ET and can be reached at 800-677-1116 or www.eldercare.gov.

According to recent research by the Federal Transit Administration, the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration, n4a and the National Aging and Disability Transportation Center, the rise in the 65-plus population—some 45 million and growing—has triggered a corresponding spike in the number of nondrivers of more than 1.1 million between 2001 and 2009.

"This is a major issue for older adults because when they lack access to transportation, they can't get to the doctor, the grocery store or see friends and family as much, which means their overall well-being is likely to suffer," added Kathy Greenlee, Assistant Secretary for Aging.

Tax Time Is ID Theft Season; Get Your Credit Report

It's tax time again. The Federal Trade Commission notes that one-third of all ID theft complaints it receives are tax related, three times as large as any other type of ID theft. So tax season is a good time to review your personal financial records and ensure they are accurate and there are no unknown or erroneous data in them.

One record you'll want to review is your credit report. It can alert you to accounts that might have been opened by ID thieves. You are entitled to a free annual copy of your credit report from each of the three nationwide credit bureaus: Equifax, Experian and TransUnion. Just go to www.annualcreditreport.com to get your free report.

"The credit report gives consumers an excellent comprehensive overview of their outstanding credit obligations," says Stuart K. Pratt, president and CEO of the Consumer Data Industry Association. "While the lenders and credit bureaus have a number of sophisticated security protocols in place to inhibit identity theft and fraud, there can still be instances where a criminal with access to your personal information—as in the IRS data breach—can result in a problem. Monitor your financial relationships. The credit report is one of the easiest and best ways to do that," notes Pratt.

After you get your credit report, make sure all the accounts are yours. If you see one that you don't recognize or an account that has an error, contact the credit bureau. You can also contact the creditor or lender that provided the information to the credit bureau and let them know about the issue.

In a number of situations, information you provide the credit bureau will be sent to the lender. The lender will verify whether the information is correct or not and then the credit bureau will notify you of the results. If there's information that needs to be updated, the credit bureau will do so. If it's a case of identity theft, the credit bureau will work with you to remove the fraudulent information from your file and to place appropriate alerts that can help prevent fraudulent transactions from appearing on your file in the future.

Not all data breaches result in identity theft. But it's always a good practice to be a savvy consumer and check your financial records to make sure that's the case. (NAPSI)

Deter Smartphone Thefts and Protect Your Data

As Americans increasingly prefer mobile-first lifestyles, our mobile devices hold personal data that must be protected. That's why the wireless industry is proactively working to help you protect your smartphones and your information.

CTIA and participating wireless companies developed the "Smartphone Anti-Theft Voluntary Commitment" that will, at no cost to consumers:

- Remote wipe the owner's data in the event it is lost or stolen;
- Render the smartphone inoperable to an unauthorized user; and
- Prevent reactivation without the owner's permission.

Yet if the smartphone is recovered by the owner, the data on the smartphone can be restored to the extent feasible.

In addition to the voluntary commitment, CTIA and its member companies are individually and collectively developing consumer education campaigns to remind consumers about the numerous apps and features—many for free—available today to help deter theft and protect your personal information. These efforts are clearly working; there was a more than 20 percent increase in PIN and password usage from 2012 to 2015 according to a recent survey.

While the wireless industry is actively helping protect consumers, it's important that users also take some important and simple steps to protect their smartphones and their personal information.

BEFORE your smartphone is lost or stolen:

1. Be Aware. Know your surroundings and be cognizant of your smartphone use behavior. Try not to call attention to your smartphone, leave it lying around or let strangers "borrow" it.

2. Lock It. Set a hard-to-guess password to protect your device and change it regularly.

3. Add Apps. A number of apps can remotely track, lock or erase/wipe personal information on your smartphone. In addition, some remotely trigger an alarm so people know their smartphone is stolen or photograph the thief so you can send it to police. CTIA developed a list of apps available on Apple (iOS), Android, BlackBerry, and Windows platforms so you can choose the best one(s) for you.

4. Save It (Again). If you have photos, e-mails, contacts, videos or anything else that you want to make sure is available if your smartphone is ever lost or stolen, save it somewhere else, such as a computer, USB drive or cloud service.

5. Insure It. Consider insuring your device through your wireless provider or a third-party entity so if it is lost or stolen, replacement is covered.

AFTER your smartphone is lost or stolen:

1. Report It. Immediately notify your wireless provider to avoid incurring charges. Tell the police what tracking or similar apps you have installed that may help them. If your device is lost, instruct your provider to put a "hold" on your account.

2. Locate It. Never attempt to recover your smartphone on your own, warns CTIA; your safety should always be your No. 1 priority. If you've installed apps to remotely track your smartphone, however, activate them from a safe location and remotely lock your smartphone.

3. Erase It. If you have sensitive information relating to finances, health or work, or you believe your smartphone won't be returned, "remote wipe" it similar to resetting it to its default settings. If you stored any passwords on your smartphone for email, financial accounts or remote work access, make sure you change them.

PASADENA - One of the highlights of the Rose Parade is the marching bands. Nearly everyone enjoys the stirring beat and the high stepping drum majors. The disappointment is in a couple of minutes they have passed by and you are left wanting to hear more. There is a way to satisfy this need when the 2017 Rose Parade approaches by attending the Bandfest held at Pasadena City College in the Jackie Robinson Stadium two to three days before the parade. Three shows are held each year featuring nearly all the Rose Parade bands as they perform their award-winning field shows. Each show has a different group of bands, except for the Tournament of Roses Honor Band and Herald Trumpets which introduces each show, and is three hours filled with the sound of music.

The 2016 Bandfest featured bands of all sizes. With 782 members the Allen Eagle Escadrille from Allen, Texas is considered the largest marching band in the U.S. and as it took the field for its show it was hard to make out the green of the turf. Later in the show came the Salvation Army Yorkshire Divisional Youth Band from Yorkshire, England. Although only about thirty members they produced a concert that brought a standing ovation. The band joined other Salvation Army members from around the country for the Salvation Army's 97th appearance in the parade.

The Bandfest is presented by Remo Inc. and its founder and CEO Remo Belli has been a leading manufacturer of drumheads for over 50 years. Remo through the years has provided each band with drumheads for their drums depicting the theme of the Tournament of Roses in a colorful design.

The Master of Ceremonies for the past 12 years has been Jim Hahn. Jim is the music di-
