Five Steps Toward Successful Job Hunting

Whether you're just starting your working life, looking for a new job or considering an entirely different career, useful connections and helpful tools are at your fingertips. For example, there are more than 10 million job listings on LinkedIn.

Nearly all professionals at the most sought-after companies found their way in through their professional networks.

Here are five suggestions to help you find your way in. 1. Improve your LinkedIn profile. With more than 20 million professionals including recruiters, hiring managers and decision makers using LinkedIn search every week, making simple improvements to your profile can make a big difference.

Use the profile completion meter to see personalized recommendations on which profile sections you should add to increase your chances of showing up when a recruiter does a search. And take the time to share more on who you are. For starters, make sure to add key skills you've acquired, such as project management, teamwork and communication. Hint: You're more likely to find your way in to opportunities if you list more than five skills. Also, don't forget to add a photo. This will help your connections recognize you and it helps boost your visibility with employers, too. LinkedIn members with a profile photo get up to 21 times more profile views and nine times more connection requests than those without.

2. Search smart. Job search filters let you drill down into the aspects of a particular role that matter to you such as location, company, experience level, industry, and job function. Set alerts for the companies and jobs you're interested in and update your career interests with what you're seeking. You'll get daily personalized job recommendations, some of which you can apply to straight from your phone. You can also search jobs where you have connections, and message them if you want to know more or if you want to ask for a

3. Signal that you're open to new opportunities by turning on Open Candidates in your career interests, which are found on the LinkedIn jobs page and on your profile page. This lets you privately signal to recruiters that vou're open to new opportunities. It also increases your chances of showing up in searches by recruiters.

4. Check your connections. Seventy percent of people get hired at a company where they have a personal connection. Your connections or mutual connections can be key to finding your next job. If you need a conversation starter, check for career milestones such as a job change, connections in common and similar insights to break the ice. Now is the time to message your network and catch up. You never know who will help you find your way in.

5. Don't bury the lead. When you reach out to a connection in your professional network, Adam Neumann, co-founder and CEO of WeWork, recommends not overlooking the importance of the subject line. A few catchy words that hint toward the conversation can spark a great relationship and get the person on the other end immediately engaged.

A Simpler, More Affordable Way To Invest

Just as innovation is changing how people order food, shop and make travel arrangements, financial services companies have found a way technology can make investing more convenient and affordable.

This latest trend is often referred to as automated investing. Before jumping in with your own finances, however, it's important that you learn the details to determine if an automated investment advisor is for you.

• What's automated investing? An automated investment advisor (sometimes referred to as "robo investing") uses sophisticated computer algorithms to offer low-cost managed investments. Users answer a series of intuitive questions about their financial goals, risk tolerance, and investment time horizon, and the automated advisor recommends a personalized investment portfolio suited to those needs. These portfolios are comprised of a diverse set of Exchange Traded Funds (ETFs) designed with low-cost diversification in mind. The financial services company executes the investment and automatically manages it for a fraction of the cost of a traditional advisor.

• How does it make investing easier and more accessible? Not everyone has the time or know-how to manage an investment portfolio, or the inclination or ability to pay potentially hefty fees for a portfolio manager to do it on their behalf. Access to an account professionally managed by human advisors, however, was historically a problem for those who did not meet their high minimums, oftentimes $500,000 or more.

Enter the automated advisor, which automatically monitors vour investment portfolio and, as the stock market fluctuates, rebalances holdings based on your risk tolerance, projected investment timeline and wealth outlook, to help keep you on track with your goals.

"Some people are very good at managing their own investments," said Rich Hagen, president of Ally Invest, the online brokerage and wealth management arm of Ally Financial. "Others just don't have the time or expertise. Younger investors, in particular, often don't have the assets needed to get the attention of a top portfolio manager. An automated advisor can solve the disconnect by making professionally managed portfolios accessible to more people."

Automated advisors sift through thousands of ETFs to invest your money into a range of diversified low-cost index ETFs. Like mutual funds, ETFs pool the money of numerous investors to purchase a group of stocks. Like index mutual funds, most are passively managed, which means they work to mimic the performance of a specific index such as the S&P 500 or the Dow Jones Industrial Average.

• What do they cost? With an automated advisor, you don't have to pay exorbitant fees, earn a sixfigure income or have thousands of dollars in savings to reap the benefits of a professionally managed investment portfolio. Industry average fees for a human financial advisor hover around 1.02 percent, meaning costs start to add up as your investment portfolio grows. Generally, automated advisors provide customized portfolios more affordably. For example, at Ally Invest Managed Portfolios, the annual advisory fee is 0.30 percent of account assets. That means for an account with a $10,000 balance, the monthly fee is $2.50. Plus, there are no trading fees and you can start investing with just $2,500.

- Can I talk to a person? A purely automated service isn't always enough, even when 24/7 phone support is available. Some firms, such as Ally Invest, provide customer service from knowledgeable professionals.
- How can I learn more about automated investing? Visit www.Ally.com and click on "managed portfolios." (NAPSI)
