Olivet Nazarene University Open House at America's Christian Credit Union

By Jayam Rutnam

Glendora - Olivet Nazarene University held an open house at the office of America's Christian Credit Union in Glendora on January 18th. Communication and Engagement

AZUSA - With the goal of fostering a more interconnected community, Azusa Unified School District has launched a new mobile app that displays the latest news, events and information surrounding its elementary, middle and high schools. Available for free download in Apple's App Store and Google Play, the official Azusa Unified App is designed to provide parents with a direct line of communication to their children's school.

Powered by Blackboard, the new app serves as a supplemental tool to offer a constantly updated feed of information with photos and links to the district's website and social media platforms. The app is also customizable to each user so that a desired school can be selected in order to receive information that is pertinent to them.

"This is another example of how Azusa Unified aims to remain on the forefront of technology so that our students have every opportunity to be successful," Azusa Superintendent Dr. Linda Kaminski said. "Through enhanced parent and community engagement, this app takes us one step closer into the learning experience of our students so that everyone with a vested interest can be involved."

The app provides easy access to the district tip line and gives the option to receive push notifications to get breaking news and updates about school closures, calendar changes, and more. Parents and local community members are encouraged to download this free mobile app to their smartphones.

New Lighting Brightens City, Saves On Utility Bill

Baldwin Park among first groups to implement energy-saving system are literally looking brighter in Baldwin Park these days. As of early this month, the city is among the first Southern California Edison (SCE) customers to officially upgrade its streetlights system.

City Manager Shannon Yauchzee said officials with SCE have been working since late November to replace Baldwin Park's existing streetlights with Light Emitting Diode (LED) bulbs. SCE associates replaced the last set of streetlight bulbs just after the New Year. The recent upgrades come at no cost to the city, since Baldwin Park's streetlights are owned and operated by SCE, according to officials. In fact, the city can expect to save as much as $14,000 to $20,000 a year in utility costs thanks to the new lights.

"Because LED lights are so efficient, most of our rates for streetlights will go down," said

BALDWIN PARK - Things Yauchzee. "These lights also last a lot longer, and there will be a lot less outages that may often be inconvenient to residents and will save SCE the cost to replace those lights."

Yauchzee noted that SCE ofto the LS1 energy-saving light ficials expect to recoup the cost of the new installations thanks to the long-term savings from the energy-friendly system.

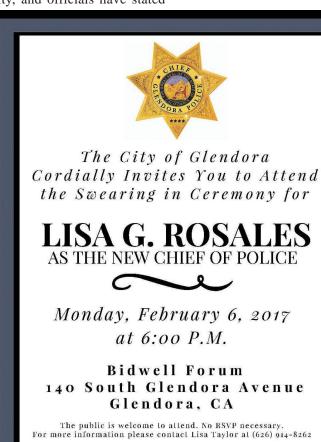

> The recent LED lighting project was approved by City Council last June after officials with the state of California and the Public Utilities Commission (PUC) approved a new rate for LED streetlights in communities served by SCE. A majority of Baldwin Park's street lights are owned by SCE. Yauchzee said. Only a few, more decorative street lights are owned by the city, and officials have stated their intent to upgrade those to LED lights in the future as well.

Meanwhile, officials said residents have already expressed their approval of the new LED system that has come in to their respective neighborhoods.

"We've had several people say it's brighter, and it makes things more clear. There's less glare and less reflection on the sky, and there is better directed light onto the street," said Yauchzee.

He also added that a Los Angeles city report also noted that improved lighting has led to reduced crime rates in neighborhoods. Among other benefits projected with the new LED streetlights are reduced energy consumption and reduced greenhouse gases, which, overall, help the environment.

Another Date Which Will Live In Infamy

A date that will live in infamy. That is how FDR described the events of December 7, 1941. September 11, 2001 was second date which deserved that designation. Both of these dates resulted from America being attacked by hostile powers from beyond our shores. January 20, 2017 may well qualify as the third infamous date. The attack in this event, came, however, not from some malignant foreign source, but from our own nation's seat of power, the office of President of the United States.

This column was first drafted the evening of the Inauguration. While I did not and could not watch the sacred tradition in which this new President took the oath of office, I did later watch a recording of his speech. It left me speechless! The overarching theme was that America has been a desperately worthless, weak nation, devoid of any decency, and ruled by small ineffective people. But now a savior has arrived, and America is going to be great again, pulled out of the malaise that has over the recent years been created by our leaders who filled the swamp and poisoned it.

Of course, patriotism is a virtue rightly ingrained in our national psyches. But a national chauvinism that positions us against every other nation or entity, and pledges that we will produce the military firepower able to get and keep their attention, provide safety at home and peace in the world, is just silly.

I know it may not be considered in good taste to invoke what Hitler promised the German people, but this evening I have been listening to and watching a recording of his first speech as chancellor in 1933. Hitler began by decimating the reputations of the leaders who before him he regarded as having demoralized and debauched the nation. He then promised to make Germany great again-he actually used the exact German equivalent words! He said that this powerful rebirth of Germany's world role must be brought about by the Volk-the German peasants and workersthe people. They must stand without equivocation, putting Germany first: first in their lives and first in the world. There must be trust in no other nation, and Germany must form no alliances in order to safeguard the Volk. And it will be done because it is the will of God!

It's all there friends. And if the United States goes any further down that road we will end up enemies of the rest of the world, with decreasing economic strength despite our increased military might. One might even remember the quasi-Nazi, Charles Lindbergh, who led a sizeable handful of citizens in chanting, America First!

Thus we may produce the end of the world's best experiment in democracy. I have recently come across an author who predicted 20 years ago what happened to-day. In 1997, the philosopher Richard Rorty in his book, Achieving our Country, described what would inevitably happen if the liberals who have controlled the nation forget to pay attention to the vast millions of rural residents and desperate unemployed workers:

At this point, something will crack. The nonsuburban electorate will decide that the system has failed and start looking around for a strong man to vote for, and ... once a strong man takes office, nobody can predict what will happen.

If the 1933 events in Germany are in any way a prototype of what we can now expect, that should shake us body and soul.

What shall we do now? I doubt that we can pass this off as simply an intellectual or academic problem which can be solved by further conferences, documents, symposia or formal papers.

Perhaps we should rather look at what has produced serious positive change in the recent past. I think of a woman who just sat in the front seats of a bus, and the Freedom Riders who traveled throughout the American South at the risk of their lives. And I remember the tens of thousands of both young and older people who hit the streets and finally whose acts were critical in ending the disastrous Vietnam war. To the extent that these actions were non-violent they gained the respect of the American people. Violence just sets things back. New generations of in-the-street activists, not journalists or academics, might blunt the destructive nationalistic thrust of the new administration, and prepare the rest of us to play an important role in making America good

Glendora's Nelson Shares Impacts of MS4

Glendora Council Member Judy Nelson spoke Saturday to the Rt. 66 Republican Koffee Klatchers about the outrageously expensive federally mandated MS4 regulations titled Municipal Separate Storm Sewer System. Nelson said first, it has nothing to do with the sewer. It is about stormwater run-off from parking lots, streets, playgrounds, and dry weather run-off caused by watering our landscaping, washing our cars or draining our swimming pools.

In 1990, U.S. EPA, under the Federal Clean Water Act, required cities and counties to obtain a NPDES (National Pollution Discharge & Elimination System) permit to measure and control discharges from pipes, man-made ditches and discharges from industrial and municipal sources, including parking lots, into surface waters into surface waters.

In 1999, under Phase II of NPDES, called MS4, or Municipal Separate Storm Sewer System, U.S. EPA issued an order requiring urbanized areas, like cities and counties, to create a Storm Water Management Program (SWMP) to reduce the contamination of storm water runoff from their jurisdiction to storm drains/channels/rivers and ultimately to the ocean.

Los Angeles County and the cities within L.A. County are the designated first group in California mandated to find ways to implement and comply with these regulations. U.S. EPA delegates State Water Resources Control Board and its nine regional boards, created in 1969 by the Porter Cologne Act, to monitor and enforce the standards set in the MS4 permit. The members of these water boards who will approve or deny the county and city MS4 permits are not ones we've elected, but ones Governor Jerry Brown has appointed.

What these boards will monitor to enforce compliance are something called TMDLs or Total Maximum Daily Loads. Nelson said, "That term describes the maximum amount of a pollutant a body of water can receive while still meeting water quality standards. In the 2001 permit there were 3 TMDLs that needed to be measured in parts per million. The 2012 permit now requires 33 TMDLs, each requiring monitoring, mitigation and measured in parts per billion. Not million, BILLION. In theory, a glass of tap water has some TMDL levels that are not permitted in our runoff."

Cities have formed watershed groups in L.A. County to extend the amount of time to reach compliance with pollutant reduction, find creative ideas and protect themselves from lawsuits.

1. Upper L.A. River Group includes Alhambra, La Canada Flintridge, Montebello, Monterey Park, Pasadena, Rosemead, San Gabriel, San Marino, South El Monte, South Pasadena, Temple City, LA County (unincorporated), LACFCD, others outside the SGV and our Council of Government are Burbank, Calabasas, Glendale, Hidden Hills, Los Angeles, San Fernan-

2. Upper San Gabriel River Group includes Baldwin Park, Covina, Glendora, Industry, La Puente, South El Monte, West Covina, LA County (unincorporated), LACFD

3. Rio Hondo/San Gabriel River Group includes Arcadia, Azusa, Bradbury, Duarte, Monrovia, Sierra Madre, LA County (unincorporated), LACFCD

4. East San Gabriel Valley Group includes Claremont, La Verne, Pomona, San Dimas

5. Lower San Gabriel River Group includes a San Gabriel Valley City and Council of Governments member Diamond Bar; and others outside the SGV and our COG Artesia, Bellflower, Cerritos, Downey, Hawaiian Gardens, La Mirada, Lakewood, Long Beach, Norwalk, Pico Rivera, Santa Fe Springs, Whittier,

6. Individual cities who are not

Lois M. Shade Former Mayor of Glendora

a part of a group and will fight this monster alone are El Monte, Irwindale and Walnut

What is so outrageous about this federal EPA program being monitored and enforced by nonelected gubernatorial appointees on water resources control boards is the requirement cities and L.A. County build new infrastructure to convey this stormwater before it enters the flood control channels. Council Member Nelson says 95% of that stormwater in our area flows along the San Gabriel River through existing regional infrastructure to settlement basins where it infiltrates into our water basins. The infiltration process naturally cleans and makes that water drinkable and swimma-

Nelson described how this infrastructure process has proceeded and the cost to various areas / groups. The Upper L.A. River group spent $100 million on a below-ground retention / infiltration basin beneath Almansor Park to provide drainage of 1,145 acres. Other proposals in other areas are pending with no dollar signs attached to them yet.

Nelson said Upper San Gabriel River Group is proposing to install infiltration galleries to capture 36 acre-feet of stormwater from 1,000 acres of tributary area including Covina, Glendora and L.A. County areas at a ball park, Khaler Russell Park, in Covina. Estimated cost: $22 million.

Estimated costs for full compliance in 20 years for some of our cities are:

Azusa - $332.5 million; Baldwin Park - $194.5 million; Covina - $156.5 million; Duarte - $172 million; Glendora $233 million; West Covina - $380.5 million. Cost for non-compliance in fines are $3,000 a day per violation up to $10,000; or, maximum $25,000 a day per violation if imposed by state court. Federal penalties are even high-

The City of Gardena and City of Duarte have filed lawsuits and Glendora and other cities are supporting their efforts. Glendora has contributed a maximum amount toward the cost of the Gardena lawsuit of $25,000.

Glendora Council Member Judy Nelson said Glendora can't come up with that kind money. If a property assessment is leveled it would add about $1,200 a year to residents' property tax bill. She did reassure us, Prop. 218 does require a vote by the property owners before that tax could be leveled.

What I can't understand is why Los Angeles County and the cities of the county have become the designated California guinea pigs? I am told by Nelson and other council members this is a mandated test run to see if this works to create more and cleaner drinking water with no funding from the feds or state. Cities have to come up with the bucks out of their city budgets.

Correct me please if I am wrong, but stormwater from the forest flows into and through Glendora and some of the other hillside communities. I have not seen nor found any requirement for the Forestry or SG National Monument to participate in this new speculative venture to clean water. A speculative venture creating new infrastructure, not using existing infrastructure, creating an impossible level of clean water, cleaner than what we drink, and leading cities into bankruptcy or denying their citizens other critical services to meet this mandate.

Sun Valley created green streets taking areas where water didn't drain properly and developed waterscapes and ponds to allow the water to eventually percolate into the ground to recharge the basin and clean the water naturally. That was at a $2.7 million cost and I'm not sure how they prevent a mosquito infestation or what that maintenance cost is.

With some of our San Gabriel Valley cities adjacent to the hill-sides of our San Gabriel Mountains, with many having created their own conservancies, couldn't we be creative and capture that water before it enters the urban area reducing run-off that carries the pollutants and allow it to percolate down to the basins? How much credit do you think they would receive from the water boards for taking that less expensive initiative?

'Time Jockey' - Native American Population

By Joe Castillo

Gabrieleno Home ... The Gabrielenos, named after the mission which they worked for from 1770-1830's, were the early inhabitants of the San Gabriel Valley. By the beginning of the 20th century, the Gabrieleno's were nearly destroyed. Their culture, language and even the name they called themselves had all been replaced by the Spanish administrators and Mission clergy.

In 1492, when Columbus arrived in the New World, California was the most densely populated region in the future United Sates. There were more tribes and languages spoken in the area than in any area in the United States of the same size. Fifty year later, Juan Cabrillo discovered California, and estimated a Native American population of 310,000 existed in the Southern California. Cabrillo first visited the port of San Diego, followed by Santa Catalina and San Clemente Islands. He had no problems with the natives and would term his encounters as 'friendly'. Cabrillo also laid anchor outside of Santa Monica Bay but did not come ashore. Even though the natives who came out to meet him at his ship were excited and animated, they were non-threatening and welcoming. Cabrillo had arrived during the hunting season, and from his view off the coast, he saw a large number of campfires and smoke. The coast of present day Long Beach was the heart of the Gabrieleno world with 20-30 villages of 500 persons each. Cabrillo would name this area 'La Bahia de Los Fumos' or Bay of Smokes.

Future Spanish explorers would later follow the same route of Cabrillo and a documented story of one of the exploration during the springtime told of an interesting encounter. A sailor on that voyage viewed the San Gabriel Mountains and noticed a 'gold' line at the bottom of the mountains. They called it 'Sabanilla de Oro' (Alter Cloth of Gold), which became the first non-native name for the area of Altadena. The gold color came from wild flowers growing along the foothills in large numbers. The Spanish called the flower 'Copa de Oro' (cup of gold), and was later renamed the California Golden Poppy, our State flower. It also became the Official Flower of the City of Altadena. Even the overall number of Gabrieleno's were critically reduced by 1850's, the golden flower is still growing in abundant numbers in

Women's Protest Marches Aren't Against Trump as Media Reports

The women's demonstrations in Washington DC and around the country and as a matter of fact around the world were not geared to be anti-Trump rallies. This date in Washington DC was selected before the elections, so no matter who was president, it would bring attention to women's rights. This was a nationwide series of protests demanding equal rights for women.

This is nothing new. One of the largest protests of the suffrage movement in the early days happened the day before Woodrow Wilson was to be inaugurated as President in 1913. Between 5,000 to 8,000 suffragists marched down Pennsylvania Avenue, past the White House.

One of the major causes of second-wave feminist movement, the Equal Rights Amendment (ERA) inspired demonstration after demonstration in the '70s. It sounds simple enough now, but at the time the ERA which guaranteed women the same rights as men - was a major milestone. Passed by Congress in 1972, the ERA had 10 years to be ratified by 38 states. However, a few states, like Illinois, stubbornly resisted and quickly incurred the attention of the National Organization for Women (NOW). The first demonstration was in May 1976, when NOW organized some 16,000 protesters in Springfield. But when Illinois held out, NOW persisted. The group organized more marches throughout the decade and on Mother's Day in 1980, a record 90,000 people demonstrated in Chicago in support of the ERA. While Illinois continued to resist ratification, the ERA marches became one of the defining efforts of the women's movement.

As for this demonstration in Washington by the women's rights movements and their supporters is not against Trump, but to bring attention to their cause. Although there were a few people that did carry anti-Trump signs, this was not the reason why this event was really going on.

As for the news media inappropriately stating this was an anti-Trump rally by women is really sad. The media should've stuck to the issue at hand and not throw such a huge twist into this. However, this has happened over the years while other presidents were in office. Anti-Obama, anti-Bush and so on.

I'm not standing up for Trump; I'm making my comments because the media put a twist on it and alienated the real issue of women's rights. I think that's wrong.

January 2017 will not only bring us a new President, a new administration, and a new Congress. It will also usher in some fresh faces at the Federal Reserve. The next meeting of the Federal Open Market Committee (FOMC) will take place on January 31st and February 1st. That meeting will mark a change in the FOMC as a new set of regional presidents rotates into voting position while some veterans rotate out. Also, with the two vacancies currently on the committee, Trump can begin to make the necessary appointments that will reflect his agenda.

This rotation to a new FOMC comes at an interesting time. The economic data on the home front has been improving, as evidenced by the 3.2% real GDP growth rate for the third quarter and the upward revision from 2.5% to 2.8% for the fourth quarter 2016 GDP (as reported by the Atlanta Fed recently).

Donald Trump and Janet Yellen are not friends, but they may need each other. For years she has been the driving force behind a critical overhaul of monetary policy essential not only to the future of the current expansion but the future of less affluent Americans. If her overhaul dies, Trump's working-class base is much more likely to be disappointed in four years regardless of change wrought from the White House. President Trump will have the power to make or break monetary policy reform in the next two years depending on his Fed Board appointments.

Donald Trump made Chair Yellen an enemy during the campaign, saying he would replace her if elected. A month ago, he told CNBC, "She should be ashamed for keeping rates low and creating a false stock mar-

As for Yellen, she fired back at Trump in recent Congressional testimony: "I was confirmed by the Senate for a four-year term which ends in January 2018 and it's fully my intention to serve out that term." Thankfully, despite this animosity, there's reason to believe Trump will take a more conciliatory tone once in office.

Meanwhile, the Trump administration is aiming to introduce legislation on tax reform, deregulation, and infrastructure spending during his first 100 days in office. Many market participants, including me, expect these initiatives to lead to stronger economic growth in 2017, which could also be accompanied by higher inflation. Accordingly, the market has been working to get its mind around the possibility that the FOMC may be more active in raising the fed funds rate in 2017 than it has been during the last decade.

If the Fed goes back to Greenspan-style preemptive tightening, as so many are clamoring, Fed policy will undermine much of what the Trump administration can accomplish for the middle class through regulatory reform and fiscal stimulus. Hence, Trump will benefit if he and Yellen learn to work togeth-

Former FOMC participant Narayana Kocherlakota has written a series of Bloomberg View columns on Trump and the Fed, including one in which he warns Trump could undermine the Fed and one in which he explains how Trump could help it. Kocherlakota fears Trump might destroy the Fed's political independence by appointing pro-growth doves. The beauty of the Yellen Fed reformation, however, is there is no need for such extremes. Trump could win Fed support simply by developing a working friendship with Yellen and appointing a supportive board.

Donald Trump will appoint two governors early next year and as many as three more by the end of 2018. If they support the lower-for-longer rate logic, everything will be just fine. Whether Trump and Yellen are cordial may not matter. But if he appoints strong dollar, tight money advocates, whoever is FOMC Chair in 2018 will have their hands full keeping Lacker, Meltzer and the rest of the hawks in check.

There has been no talk of a short list yet. All we know, thanks to a Bloomberg story citing two transition team sources, Trump plans to announce his first two nominees in the first 100 days. The board desperately needs someone familiar with today's lending environment, particularly with the regulatory hurdles imposed by Dodd-Frank and Basel III. Trump will want to choose his own nominees, but Obama's decision to appoint a community banker for one of the empty seats remains an excellent idea. The Fed Board is steeped in knowledge of the theory of interest rates, but is sorely lacking experience in the practical realities of 21st century banking.

They say on Wall Street that "perception is reality." One translation: The reason the financial sector vaulted 20% higher after the election wasn't because the big banks would suddenly post decent fourth-quarter earnings. It's because Mr. Market sees an inflationary landscape where higher interest rates are coming.

Why did President Trump stopped the decrease in FHA monthly mortgage insurance rate?

First of all, he kept his word to repeal the ex-President's executive orders. Lowering the FHA monthly mortgage insurance rate by 0.0025 was one of those executive orders. Second, this lower rate was to go into effect on January 27. The lower rate had not taken effect. This is a case of anticipating something and then not getting it. (Similar to wanting a car for Christmas, but not getting it.) Borrowers had not received the rate reduction, so nothing was actually taken from them, except the fulfilled anticipation. Fact: the reduction would have affected approximately 16-percent of borrowers. In other words, it would NOT have affected 84-percent of borrow-

My wife and I are in our 40's and are arguing about whether it would be better for us to buy life insurance now, or would it be okay to wait until we're in our mid-to-late 50's?

It is very important to consider your odds of declining health as you age. If your health changes for the worse, including your height-to-weight ratio, you could be looking at a considerably higher premium, or worse, even a 'decline' from an insurance company. There are a variety of life insurance policies available, from term, to return-of-premium term, to policies that can build cash value, accessible by you while you are living.

For Data Privacy, Set Your Sights On Visual Hackers

You've probably felt it when checking your e-mail or working in a public space: the leering eyes of strangers on your device

The glimpses that others get of your screens—whether on an airplane, in a coffee shop or on a train—may be fleeting and harmless. After all, humans are curious creatures.

But these views may also be much more than curiosity. Especially as cyber defenses become ever stronger, device screens can be luring targets for hackers seeking new ways to obtain valuable data from people and orga-

And it only takes one quick glance—or a stealthy snap of a smartphone camera—to capture your personal account details or sensitive company information, such as unreleased financial numbers or confidential communications.

This act is known as visual hacking. It involves the viewing or capturing of private, sensitive or confidential information for unauthorized use. And the opportunity for it to occur is much greater than you may think.

Nearly nine in 10 mobile workers recently surveyed by Ponemon Institute said they've caught someone looking at their screen in public spaces. At the same time, more than half of those surveyed also said they took no steps to protect information when working in public.*

Given the lack of action to prevent visual hacking, what better time than Data Privacy Day to make visual privacy a priority in your life? Data Privacy Day is an international effort annually held on Jan. 28 to create awareness about the importance of privacy and protecting personal informa-

Whether you work on the go or are someone who needs to protect your personal information, there are a number of simple steps you can take to safeguard the display of information and help prevent visual hacking. Some of these steps include:

• Being mindful of your surroundings when working in public spaces. If you're working in a coffee shop, hotel lobby or airport, for example, seek out workspaces that provide the most privacy from prying eyes. This can reduce opportunities for a visual hacker to see and steal valuable information from your device's screen.

• Using privacy filters on your device screen to blacken out the angled view of onlookers. Privacy screens are available for all device types, including monitors, laptops, tablets and smartphones. For those who travel or work on the go, these filters may be available from your workplace's IT department and are also available from popular online retailers.

• Adopting security best-practices from the workplace. One of the easiest practices you can adopt is a clean-desk policy only applied to mobile devices. Think of it as a "clean screen" approach, with sensitive information being displayed on your screen only when it's needed. For example, don't leave confidential work data or private personal information up on your screen while you take a phone call or talk to your seatmate.

Visual hacking is already happening—and it might be targeting you if you use mobile devices or laptops in public spaces.

This Data Privacy Day, make a personal commitment to safeguarding your visual privacy and reducing opportunities for visual hackers. Taking small steps today can save you-or your company—significant costs and headaches down the road.

Getting To The Heart Of Sudden Cardiac Arrest

sional athlete can suffer from sudden cardiac arrest-but a look at Olympic skater Paul Wylie's story may help to shed some light on what you need to know about the latest advancements in implantable heart devices that protect against sudden cardiac arrest and treat other irregular heart rhythms.

In 1992, Wylie won the silver medal in men's figure skating at the Winter Olympic Games. After the Olympics, he joined the professional skating ranks, winning the 1992 U.S. Open Professional Championship and the 1993 World Professional Figure Skating Championships; he then toured with Stars on Ice for six years before retiring.

Today, at 52, Wylie remains an avid skater, skier and runner, and continues coaching and performing. But in April 2015, he collapsed suddenly while running with friends. Luckily, one of his workout partners started CPR immediately.

Upon arrival, paramedics were able to resuscitate him. He was then put into a medically induced coma for several days. Wylie was shocked when he woke and learned that he had suffered sudden cardiac arrest, an abrupt loss of heart function that can result in death if not treated within minutes. In fact, approximately 95 tive and have had MRIs in the

Even a fit and healthy profespercent of sudden cardiac arrest cases are fatal, claiming more than 450,000 lives annually in the

> "Once I was conscious, it took days to get my head around the fact that I was so close to deathin fact, that I had died—and just how fortunate I felt to have had the circumstances be what they were," said Wylie.

After surviving sudden cardiac arrest, Wylie knew he had to look at ways to avoid another episode in the future. After researching options, he chose a device called an implantable cardioverter defibrillator (ICD), which continuously monitors his heart. If a dangerous and potentially lifethreatening heart rate is detected, the ICD sends a lifesaving electrical signal to correct it.

Wylie is now feeling great and recovering nicely. He is skating and coaching regularly, while hitting the gym and running again. However, he is not able to get an MRI (magnetic resonance imaging) scan. Due to the potential harmful interactions between the magnet field and his implanted heart device, he is not able to have this important diagnostic scan that helps to diagnose various conditions including stroke, cancer, Alzheimer's disease, and muscle, bone and joint pain.

"I worry because I am so ac-past, so I know this could become an issue in the future," said Wylie. "I think it's important that people know to ask their doctor about heart devices that are MRconditional, meaning they can allow for MRI screening."

When he is ready for his next device, Wylie won't have to decide between the lifesaving protection he gets from his ICD and the option to have an MRI scan. The U.S. FDA recently approved an entire suite of implantable cardiac devices by Medtronic that allow for MRI scans in both 1.5 or 3 Tesla machines. These devices include pacemakers, ICDs, insertable cardiac monitors and cardiac resynchronization therapy defibrillators.

While February is Heart Month, any time is a good time to learn more about newly available implantable cardiac devices. If you or a loved one is evaluating a recommendation from a doctor to receive an implantable heart device, consider asking if it has been approved for use in MRI scans.

School Choice Coalitions Unite Americans Of All Backgrounds

by Andrew Campanella

The holidays are over and many of us are hunkering down to wait out the rest of the winter. Tens of millions of students across the country will be celebrating their educational options from January 22 through 28—traditional public schools, charter schools, magnet schools, private schools, online academies, and home education. It's National School Choice Week, and with more than 21,000 events going on nationwide, it's clear there's a lot to celebrate.

While some are celebrating the education choices they've been able to make, others are rallying to push for more choices where options are limited for parents.

School choice coalitions in nearly 30 states will host large events with hundreds or thousands of attendees. Iowa Gov. Terry Branstad, Nevada Sen. Scott Hammond, Emmy Award-winning former news anchor Campbell Brown and others will give keynote addresses in places as far away as Connecticut, New Mexico, Colorado, Texas, Nebraska, Rhode Island, Mississippi and Wyoming.

How can one cause unite single parents and governors, urban and rural families in red and blue states with high and low incomes?

It's easy to get behind school choice because it's easy to get behind quality education for every child. School choice programs give parents more choices so they can find a school that fits their children's individual needs. School choice puts parents in charge—because nobody knows the kids better or loves the kids more than their parents.

While kids from different families, different states and different income levels may have different needs and goals, they all have parents who know them, love them and want what's best for them. And that's something we can all celebrate.

To learn more about events near you and educational options in your state, visit www.schoolchoiceweek.com. (NAPSI)

How To Handle Your Own Retirement

Retirement is evolving. And savings products that can proif you're part of the baby boomer generation—an estimated 76 million Americans born between 1946 and 1964—you're seeing this evolution first-hand. Call it the "new retirement," where it's increasingly likely your employer no longer provides you with a pension. This means it's up to you to take care of your golden years. Are you ready? many of your peers.

The Problem Five years after the first wave of boomers turned 65, the Bankers Life Center for a Secure Retirement checked in with middle-income Americans to see how retirement is unfolding for this generation. Less than half feel they have a strong understanding of financial matters, and of the 84 percent who think of themselves as at least somewhat financially literate, most haven't done enough to put that knowledge to good use. Three-quarters have not calculated a monthly retirement income number goal they need to reach; nine in 10 don't have a written retirement plan; and nearly seven in 10 admit that they don't have, or don't know whether they have, the financial resources to live comfortably to age 85, the average life expectancy of a 65-year-old boomer today. What You Can Do

Retirement planning can be challenging and complex. Fortunately, you can do five things to become more financially literate and to ensure a more secure retirement for your future.

- 1. Develop a plan: Even if you started preparing for retirement late, getting a plan in place will help you figure out what steps to take now and what steps you may need to take in the future.
- 2. Consider professional guidance: You don't need to be wealthy to benefit from financial professionals. Their experience in retirement planning can be an extremely valuable resource in helping you find vide a reliable monthly income.

3. Don't be overly reliant on benefit programs: Retirement is becoming more dependent on individual contributions—only a third of nonretired boomers expect to get guaranteed postemployment income from an employer. Also, Social Security was never designed to fully replace one's wages. 4. Educate yourself: Many If you are, you're ahead of products are available to help you plan and save for your retirement, provide income and protect your assets. Take the time to learn about mutual funds, IRAs, Roth IRAs, insur> ance and annuities. 5. Be prepared: Plan to meet unexpected situations by creating or updating a will and power of attorney.

Duarte Elks Continue to Serve Our Youth

DUARTE - Jerry Delker is pillar of the Duarte community. As an active member of the Duarte Elks Lodge, he has created a remarkable program to repair and donate bikes to children in our community. He applied for a national level grant initially, was able to build a storage shed at MIT here in Duarte, and even holds bike repair classes for MIT students on Thursday afternoons. The Elks are also instrumental in providing bike helmets to the Duarte Public Safety office to give to children at various city events. Duarte Kiwanis President, Cheryl Reynolds was happy to support Jerry and the Duarte Elks efforts by providing a $300.00 check for the bike program.
