With this gift, physicians and nurses will be able to place an iPad in the room of COVID and other critically-ill patients for the duration of the admission and reduce potential exposure and use of personal protective equipment going in and out of the room. Over 150 residents of San Dimas held a protest opposite the Motel 6 in San Dimas By Jayam Rutnam

SAN DIMAS — The City of San Dimas was one of the latest sites to be targeted by the County of Los Angeles for hosting Project RoomKey. This initiative, largely publicized by Governor Gavin Newson, was a partnership between G6 Hospitality parent corporation to Motel 6 – and the State of California aimed to use the motels to shelter persons experiencing homelessness during the COVID-19 pandemic. The City Council had a closed session on Thursday, May 7, to determine if they would take legal action to challenge this action. In the days before the closed session, Ryan A. Vienna, Mayor Pro Tem of the City Council, posted on his social media a statement making the community aware of the impending signing of a contract between the county and G6 Hospitality. During the public comment period prior to the closed session, citizens voiced their opposition to Project RoomKey. The City Council received numerous emails as well from members of the community in opposition. The City Attorney, Jeff Malawy, reported the City Council decided to not take legal action against the county. Instead, the City Council expressed their opposition to Project RoomKey as proposed and directed him to negotiate specific terms with the County that would address their concerns. Community members organized a protest in opposition of Project RoomKey in San Dimas. On Saturday May 9th, nearly 150 members of the community turned out to the Motel 6 location in San Dimas. All members of the City Council attended. Vienna expressed concerns regarding various aspects of the program. Those concerns included the displacing of persons experiencing homelessness who were already housed through a city-sponsored program at this Motel 6 location. He added concern for persons in need of affordable housing living at the location that would be displaced. Vienna argued this was counterproductive to the overall effort stating, "This would make homeless people homeless." Vienna expressed concern regarding local control, the lack of community engagement and transpar-regarding ency RoomKey, the lack of funding from the County for law enforcement services to offset contract city funding for such a program, the lack of a transition plan for once the term of the program is complete, and safety concerns.

Following Vienna, Mayor Emmett G. Badar announced he had spoken with the CEO of G6 Hospitality who told him, after discussion, he will talk with the county to pull out of the deal. Later in the day, Badar stated, "I'm happy to announce the matter regarding Project RoomKey has been resolved in the best interest of all parties." Vienna also made similar remarks adding, "Thank you to the County of Los Angeles and Motel 6 - G6 Hospitality for your continued partnership with our community."

According to Gladys Dyo of San Dimas, who participated in the protest. "This is certainly a win for the City of San Dimas."

El Monte City School District Provides Students With More Than 4,000 Chromebooks, 1,400 Wi-Fi Hotspots

Family members and students pick up Chromebooks and hotspots at El Monte City School District, ensuring connectivity during the District's transition to Distance Learning in response to the COVID-19 pandemic. El Monte City School District has provided more than 4,000 Chromebooks and close to 1,400 Wi-Fi hotspots.

EL MONTE – El Monte City School District is distributing more than 4,000 Chromebooks and close to 1,400 Wi-Fi hotspots to students and their families as part of a Distance Learning program launched in response to the COVID-19 pandemic.

District leaders determined need for the digital tools through an extensive survey of community members; tools have been distributed over several weeks.

"El Monte City School District is committed to ensuring all our students have equal access to the best possible instructional resources at all times," Superintendent Dr. Maribel Garcia said. "This health crisis has created challenges for many across our communities – we do not want their children's education to be one of those challenges."

The District serves more than 8,000 students, of whom more than 93 percent are from socioeconomically challenged households. As a result, the District rolled out its Distance Learning program in two phases after closing campuses on March 16 at the request of Los Angeles County public health and education officials.

Phase 1 of the program provided students with printed materials to reinforce and review grade-level skills. Teachers checked in with students by phone or computer, depending on availability.

Phase 2, launched on April 27, is designed to advance learning consistent with the District's reputation for strong academic success. Students use digital tools such as Google Meet, Google Classroom and Class Dojo to meet with their teachers, complete online assignments and receive feedback from their

"We made adjustments in recognition that our students face significant new challenges during the county and state orders to stay at home," Garcia said. "But we are also committed to our mission to educate our community, and we will not compromise on our standards for success."

El Monte City School District has been recognized for its stellar academics. Earlier this year, five of the District's 15 schools were named California Distinguished Schools – the state's highest honor.

In addition, three schools have been named Leader in Me Lighthouse schools, a certification awarded to just over 300 schools worldwide.

Family members, who picked up the laptops at walk-up and drive-up distribution points, thanked the District for ensuring student connectivity, and noted how much they and their children missed school.

El Monte City School District has also committed to providing children with daily nutrition, offering four grab-and-go meals a day - breakfast, lunch, snack and $supper-through\ drive-through$ distribution location at four schools.

The District's campuses will remain closed through the end of the 2019-20 academic year.

Two Emanate Health Leaders Named "Top Women Leaders in Healthcare"

Dr. Jacqueline Bracy

COVINA - Emanate Health Chief Nurse & Clinical Executive Melissa Howard and Dr. Jacqueline Bracy, a practicing gynecologist and president of Emanate Health Medical Group, have been named "Top Women Leaders in Healthcare" in the region by the Los Angeles Business Journal (LABJ).

"Emanate Health is very fortunate to have two talented industry leaders who help make Emanate Health a leading health care system in the San Gabriel Valley," said Rob Curry, President & CEO of Emanate Health. "These women used their industry expertise to establish valuable clinical protocols and their leadership to increase health care access to a growing number of people in our region."

Howard and Dr. Bracy were selected from a field of more than 100 females from health care systems throughout Southern California based on their service as accomplished senior-level leaders in administrative or clinical roles in the industry, exhibit a willingness to share expertise with others in the field and demonstrate leadership in civic/community organizations. This is the first time that the LABJ has recognized outstanding women in the health care indus-

In her role, Howard oversees clinical activities at Emanate Health Inter-Community Hospital in Covina and Emanate Health Foothill Presbyterian Hospital in Glendora, and is a member of the health care system's senior executive leadership team. She is credited with successfully guiding initiatives that helped to substantially improve patient safety, employee retention and financial sustainability at both hospitals.

Ms. Howard also helped reinvigorate the Clinical Nurse Ladder program, which promotes leadership, implemented evidence-based nursing practices and promoted the value of compassionate care. She holds undergrad and post-graduate degrees in nursing from Azusa Pacific University, where she's a regular lecturer, a former board member of the school's nursing honor society and a mentor for young professionals in a variety of indus-

Dr. Bracy, who owns a private gynecology practice in Glendora, has overseen the growth of the Emanate Health Medical Group from a handful of physicians to more than 40. She has been responsible for improving access of care to the underprivileged, promoting the delivery of chronic and specialty care to the underserved and driving patient safety in recent years.

As an African-American woman, Dr. Bracy has promoted cultural sensitivity, diversity and equality in her line of work, and served as an inspiration to men and women at Emanate Health. She holds a post-graduate degree in Health Administration from the University of Southern California and a medical degree from State University of New York, Health Science University in Brooklyn.

"With a global pandemic as a backdrop, what makes these women even more impressive and admirable is that they're on the front lines of COVID-19 making critical operational and clinical decisions to help keep our communities safe and provide the care when our patients need it most," Curry said.

Man Arrested in San Bernardino for Covina Assault

By George Ogden

COVINA - Police have been on the lookout for a Covina man suspected of assaulting and injuring a female neighbor during a fight, was found Thursday, May 7th in San Bernardino.

Police arrested Ryan Piercy, 36, on suspicion of felony assault and mayhem from an April 29th incident where he badly beat a 49-year-old female neighbor.

On the morning of the incident, the Covina Police responded to the 1100 block of Badillo, an area where there are single story quadraplexes all along that street which is across the street from Royal Oak Middle School.

The incident started when the female "victim" came to the home of the suspect and his mother with a hammer. There had been an ongoing feud between them over noise issues. However, that morning, police are not sure why or what sparked the victim to go to the suspects home. With that "hammer", she used it to bang on the front door. The suspect's mother was obviously not happy with this woman smashing the front door with a hammer and a verbal confrontation took place. The son joined the argument and this escalated to the point where the woman with the hammer picked up a potted plant and through it at the mother and son. From there the woman with the hammer attacked the son's mother and started pulling her hair. The son, coming to the aid of his mother and defending her ended punching and beating the woman. The son's beating appeared to be excessive where she had to be hospitalized. The woman suffered a large cut to

Police did not say if the "victim" was also arrested or that might be pending because of her attack on the mother and son.

Police found that there was a security surveillance recording of the incident. This was reviewed by detectives and will also be process through the district attorney's office. Charges may be pending on the woman with the hammer.

Los Angeles County Launch 'Great Plates Delivered' Initiative

LOS ANGELES COUNTY -The County of Los Angeles announced participation in the State of California's 'Great Plates Delivered' initiative. With the support of the Board of Supervisors and with a partnership between the LA County Department of Workforce Development, Aging and Community Services (WDACS) and the Office of Emergency Management, LA County will provide three homedelivered meals a day to qualifying older adults and adults over 60 who are high-risk as determined by the CDC, while also stimulating the economy by bringing employees back to work from the restaurant, hospitality, and transportation industries.

Individual participants may apply for 'Great Plates Delivered' by calling 2-1-1. To be eligible for participation, individuals must meet requirements that includes age, inability to prepare or obtain meals, and are not currently receiving assistance from other state or federal nutrition assistance programs.

Restaurants interested in participating in the 'Great Plates Delivered' program should fill out an interest form at https:// wdacs.lacounty.gov/greatplates. Food providers will be selected based on factors that include their ability to meet volume and nutritional standards, and prioritize local jobs, worker retention, worker health and safety, and standards of equity and fairness in employment practices. The County is finalizing additional criteria which will be posted on their website in the days ahead.

LA County is launching the first phase of 'Great Plates Delivered' initiative with a partnership with UNITE HERE Local 11's Hospitality Training Academy (HTA) as WDACS continues to work to expand the program with partnerships with local restaurants. HTA offers the only hospitality/food service training program in California that focuses on union employment, providing participants with an opportunity to secure career pathways with good wages and benefits. HTA will utilize its network of hotels and commercial kitchens to provide three meals a day to 1,500 individuals across the County. The County will also partner with restaurants/food service providers, including small neighborhood food establishments, to provide meals through the 'Great Plates Delivered' program. To the extent possible, the County will assign participants to restaurants located in the same city or neighborhood.

"L.A. County is proud to partner with hospitality workers, restaurants, and cities to implement this innovative program to provide meals for seniors who are most in need," Supervisor Barger said. "This collaborative effort bolsters local business, supports the regional economy, and ensures the well-being and care of at-risk seniors. This act of unity and creativity, which benefits so many in our community, is a win-

"This innovative program creates jobs for union and restaurant workers to craft nutritious meals and deliver them to older adults," said Otto Solórzano, Acting Director of the LA County Department of Workforce Development, Aging and Community Services. "This is part of our continued effort to maximize the impact of every taxpayer dollar. We are creating jobs and combating hunger at the same time."

LA County will implement 'Great Plates Delivered' in all cities and unincorporated areas in LA County that do not have their own locally operated programs.

'Great Plates Delivered' is jointly funded by FEMA (75% match), the State (18.75%), and local jurisdictions (6.25%). Per FEMA, the program will run until June 10, 2020. It is anticipated that the State will seek two additional 30-day extensions from FEMA which, if approved, would extend 'Great Plates Delivered' to as late as August 10,

For more information about the 'Great Plates Delivered' initiative in LA County, visit https:/ /wdacs.lacounty.gov/greatplates. This webpage will be updated with new information as this new program is rolled out.

Civilian Oversight Panel Issues Subpoena to Sheriff Villanueva After He Repeatedly Fails to Attend Oversight Meetings

LOS ANGELES COUNTY -The Civilian Oversight Commission for the L.A. County Sheriff's Department hosted a virtual Commission meeting on May 7th wherein the Commission unanimously voted to approve the issuance of a subpoena, ordering Sheriff Villanueva to attend the next meeting of the oversight

After failing to attend or send personnel for the third consecutive meeting, the Civilian Oversight Commission utilized its newly granted subpoena power for the first time, by ordering the Inspector General to issue a subpoena to Los Angeles County Sheriff Alex Villanueva and his representatives to attend the May 21, 2020 meeting of the Commission. Earlier this year, the Los Angeles County Board of Supervisors granted the Civilian Oversight Commission the authority to subpoena Sheriff personnel and documents in the furtherance of the Commission's work. Also, in March of this year, Los Angeles County voters approved Measure R, which also granted subpoena power to the Oversight Commission.

"After repeated requests for the Sheriff to attend our Commission meetings, no one from the department has shown up," said Commission Chair Patti Giggans, Executive Director of Peace over Violence. "The meetings now conducted virtually twice a month due to the critical COVID-19 crisis are very well attended by the public. We are in a pandemic which calls for more oversight, more collaboration, more input into policy, not less. The role of the Sheriff Civilian Oversight Commission is a public mandate and one that every commissioner takes seriously." Giggans continued, "Today, the Commission received more than 400 emailed public comments from community members, so there is high public interest in what we are doing. Unfortunately, we have to resort to subpoena to compel the Sheriff to be present to answer questions and for us to engage in our oversight function. The Los Angeles community expects the Commission to fulfill our mandate and to do our job."

According to Brian K. Williams, Executive Director of the Sheriff Civilian Oversight Commission, on May 5, 2020, a letter was transmitted to Sheriff Villanueva specifically requesting his attendance at the Commission's May 7, 2020 meeting to address issues involving the proposed station closings. On May 6, 2020, Williams was informed that the Sheriff would not attend. "This is the third meeting in a row where the Sheriff's Department has not been represented, this is unfair to the Commission, the community and the men and women of the Sheriff's Department whose voice we also need to hear."

The issue of the Sheriff's attendance at the meeting came to a head during a discussion of the Sheriff's Department's handling of the COVID-19 crisis within the County jail system. Out of the current 11,837 inmates within the County jail system, 170 have tested positive for the virus and 3,785 are currently under quarantine. Questions were raised about the current conditions and care of the inmates within the system.

Only Budget, COVID Bills | How Free Is The Free On Legislature Agendas

Recently we've seen the cities - Covina, West Covina and now San Dimas - come out in force to object to Gov. Newsom's Roomkey Project, his best attempt to get the homeless off the streets. The protesting residents were met with success when management of the hotels declined the offered state contract. We've found out in or 48th Assembly District and East San Gabriel Vallev we can make a difference if we work together, support our local elected people and law enforcement teams.

In general round numbers, homeless on our streets are onethird in need of mental health intervention and treatment; onethird are suffering from drug and alcohol addiction and have not had any treatment either from referrals at the street level or in jail before release. The other one-third of our homeless population are the down-and-outers, the ones who have lost their job, women and children who have left their homes to escape abuse and other problems that with any sort of intervention are solvable.

Joe Gardner, retired law enforcement officer and currently an L.A. County Probation Commissioner going into his fourth term on that Commission, sent out a paper called, From the keyboard of Joe Gardner Homelessness is a Symptom in February 2018. The first truism in Joe's paper: "A key reason we have this state-wide problem of homelessness is because of the collapsing of the criminal justice system brought on by a progressive legislature, social justice advocates and an acquiescent governor [former Gov. Jerry Brown with Lt. Gov. Gavin Newsom} that have pushed forward prison realignment (AB109) Proposition 47 and ... Proposition 57. Tens of thousands that should still be in prison have now become "freerange" probationers. The result is criminal recidivism. Moving many felony crimes to misdemeanor status has made it nearly impossible to prosecute anvone.'

One clear picture of the collapse of our criminal justice system came to Glendora on Wednesday, April 29th at 8:30 in the morning when Glendora Police Officers got a call advising a male was attempting to break into a vehicle. They responded and found out the vehicle he'd broken into was stolen out of East Los Angeles and the suspect had stolen property and narcotics with him. He was arrested and due to California Zero-Bail Policy he was issued a citation and released.

Two additional calls for service on the same day on this same suspect resulted in the same outcome after a pursuit along the 10 freeway involving several law enforcement agencies. When he was finally caught and arrested, due to California Zero-Bail Policy, he was issued a citation and released.

At Glendora Chamber of Commerce's Legislative Meeting, a legislative staffer said the only thing the state legislature will be tackling this year is the state budget now at $55 billion in red ink and issues related to the COVID 19 pandemic. I believe one of the solutions to COVID 19 and the homeless pandemic we are facing in Los Angeles and affecting all of Los Angeles County is offered by Sen. John Moorlach (R-37 SD).

Moorlach, working with Dr. Drew Pinsky, created SB 640, a 2019 piece of legislation to ... "clarify the definition of 'gravely disabled' to focus on an individual's capacity to make informed decisions about his or her personal well-being. This bill allows counties to opt in to the new definition if the County Board of Supervisors elects do

SB 640 has the support of the California Police Chiefs Association and California District Attorney Association and would take us back to the original intent of the bipartisan Lanterman Petris Short (LPS) Act.

Moorlack's fact sheet tells us: "In 1967, California addressed involuntary civil commitments when it passed the bipartisan Lanterman Petris Short (LPS) Act. The LPS Act was intended to end inappropriate, indefinite, and involuntary commitments. It also was to provide prompt evaluations and treatment, guarantee and protect public safety, safeguard individual rights through judicial review and establish conservatorship programs. In total LPS sought to encourage full use of current resources and to protect vulnerable individuals from criminal acts."

TIME JOCKEY" - Fremont's Band

We now have a mental health care system that places those needing help in our jail system confirmed by statements noting L.A. County Jail is the largest mental health facility in the U.S. today. Thanks to the liberal establishment that created AB 109 realignment known as the early release program, and Prop. 47 and Prop. 57, down grading felonies to misdemeanors, those individuals are now living on our streets, in tents, and have become one of the most vulnerable high-risk COVID 19 groups.

Dr. Pinsky believes the mental health issue is solvable by:

1. Addressing the LPS Act. 2. Expand conservatorships.

3. Increasing the number of psychiatric hospital beds, psychiatrists, out-patient clinics with structured living environments.

You can listen to Sen. Moorlach make his presentation to the Senate Health Committee, listen to the Chair, Sen. Richard Pan (D-SD 6 Sacramento) of that Committee seemingly make excuses not to pass the bill out of committee. To paraphrase Pan, his concerns about the bill were the words being used that would become law and didn't want to stigmatize people with mental health issues. Pan challenged Moorlach on missing components in his bill as Pan announced he is chair of the budget subcommittee. I would challenge all to go to Sen. John Moorlach's website, moorlach.cssrc.us, and click on Legislation/Policy, then on the year 2019 and scroll down to SB 640 titled Mental Health Services: Gravely Disabled. That will take you to a page with several videos that will explain exactly why on our streets, in tents, remain those with mental health issues that need intervention and serious help.

Only COVID 19 related bills to be discussed we are told. Excellent time to discuss SB 640 to get the most vulnerable off the Exercise Of Religion?

The framers of the Constitution wisely built into the document a certain amount of ambiguity. The strict constructionists, who now seem to dominate America's courts, suggest that every case must be decided not on the basis of any historical development, but only on what the framers originally meant. That might work had the framers been more precise, but they were not.

Among the less well-defined precepts, their slipperiness appears in the first amendment. It

Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof.

In all the years following the Constitution's adoption, the courts have struggled to define both the establishment clause and the free exercise clause. Often the Supreme Court's political makeup has determined how it interpreted these clauses. My guess is that the framers purposely opted for the undefined language and left precise interpretation up to later generations. So much for "original intent." Let's take examples generated by the omnipresent coronavirus. In state after state there are prohibitions about public gatherings larger than ten individuals. Larger gatherings, including religious ones, were said to be in violation. Nevertheless, they let the state or the local jurisdiction define the precise meaning of the prohibition. As devastating as the pandemic has been, our commitment to social distancing has saved thousands of lives. While many of these closed areas have slowly been opened, it appears that others must legally remain closed for the foreseeable fu-sponded to the order to remain closed, and yet through the wonder of streaming and other electronic tools, services have taken place in empty churches or in living rooms, presided over by solitary figures. But there were a few religious groups that maintained their traditional gathered practic-

As far as I know, none of these pastors, priests, rabbis or imams has been arrested or charged. When confronted with their violation of the law, the response has centered on the "free exercise" language of the Constitution. One minister has spelled out his position by declaring that, "public worship is a right that government cannot prohibit." When the authorities commanded the disciples to cease their public disturbance, Peter responded "We must serve God rather then men."(Acts 5:29). I used that biblical defense during the civil rights days when a mixed racial group demanded to be served in an all-white restaurant. While we violated the local law, we did so in the name of a higher law, and knowingly paid the price the lower law had stipulated.

Two hundred Hasidic Jews gathered in a Brooklyn park to pay their respects to an honored rabbi who had died. The New York City mayor called in the police to disperse the crowd. In this case, the Constitution's freedom of religion clause did not apply. What did apply was the public good, and when religious practice is in conflict with the public good it seems to me that the latter must prevail.

Consider a brace of fictional absurd examples. 1. The Rev. Mr. Righteous tells members of his congregation to take from grocery shelves what was needed for a religious observance, without paying. Of course, they were arrested. 2. The gods had decreed that each year a virgin be sacrificed. The priest wielded the knife. Despite what any holy book declared, he would be tried for murder.

Now I am not a legal scholar and have not dug that deeply into the legal evidence, but I do have a modicum of common sense. If my religious tradition jeopardizes either the public good or any individual's human rights, the freedom of religion has crossed a line. I don't know if it has ever appeared in any judicial finding, but somewhere there must be the law of common sense.

When a religious body does something endangering either its own members or the general public, it seems reasonable for the rights of the community to prevail. Until some government authority declares public gatherings to be acceptable, even the Constitution's freedom of religion clause must take a back seat. I'll leave it to legal scholars to define just how this conflict between religious practices and the public good must apply. In the meantime I suggest that even the most pious should be governed by the larger good.

On to Sonoma... In the mid-1840's, California was under Mexican rule but was being eyed by a number of international military powers. The United States, Great Britain, France, and Russia were discussing the prospects of acquisition with Mexico, and even Californios had their own ideas of an independent republic.

In 1843, John Charles Fremont, a young 32-year old Lieutenant, led a band of 39 American soldiers and surveyors on a simple mission on whose objective it was to survey the largely unknown territory between the Rocky Mountains and the Pacific Ocean. Fremont accomplished his mission and mapped Northern California like it had never been mapped before. He returned to Kansas, and eventually returned to Washington D.C. where he was given a double promotion of Captain and 1st Lieutenant, and given a new mission to go map the entire state of California more extensively.

By now, California had over 2,500 immigrants with 2,000 being from the United States. Most of the immigrants had been invited by General Mariano Vallejo, Mexico's leading commander in Northern California. With a growing presence of Americans in Mexico California, the United States had confidentially sent Fremont to Monterey to gain a better understanding of what California looked like if the opportunity came up for acquisition. Fremont and his men traveled to Monterey where they sought and were given permission to travel thru Northern California. But the next day, the Mexican government rescinded their permission and instead demanded Fremont and his band to leave California. Fremont made an encampment south of Monterey at a location called Hawk's Peak, and eventually the Mexican forces and Fremont's band reached an agreement that Fremont should leave by going north to Oregon. So, Fremont went to Oregon where he awaited further instructions and when they finally arrived in May 1846, he was requested to return to California where General Castro was in the process of preparing to move against American settlers along the Sacramento Riv-

Meanwhile, General Vallejo had complete control of the Sonoma area and was the military presence of all Northern California. He designed the town of Sonoma placing a central plaza with adobe structures surrounding it. He built a long barrack for his men and placed it next to the old Mission property holdings. In his role in the Mexican government especially in California, Vallejo had invited Americans to settle in California and had openly encouraged United States acquisition of California from Mexico, but Mexico was not eager to give up its stake in California

As Fremont moved into a position to block General Castro from attacking American settlers, General Vallejo was in charge of a small number of soldiers protecting the Sonoma plaza. On June 14, 1846, Fremont anticipated the United States would eventually commence in the acquisition of California, and he led 30 trappers and local settlers, mostly Americans, in taking over Sonoma and raising the California Bear flag while declaring California an independent republic. Eventually, hostilities emerged when the United States declared War on Mexico, and Vallejo was arrested for two months at Fort Sutter during the rebellion. Lieutenant Fremont would lead the California forces against Mexico and would become a leader in California for years to come and General Vallejo would also eventually return to prominence and become a leader in California's future...

It is interesting that there seems to be two sets of medical experts out there. The ones that are appointed by the governments, Federal, State and Counties, that voice their opinions of what needs to take place to combat this virus issue. Then you have the independent doctors and physicians' organizations, committees and associations that give us their expert opinions.

The government representatives "tell us what to do" in regards to this virus issue. One thing they tell us to do is to stay home. On the other side of this, these doctor associations are basically telling us something different. They are indicating that what is going on with this "stay at home order" is that people's immune systems are in jeopardy because their immune antibodies are not being able to do their job. They are saying that those "stay at home" people may be responsible for extending this virus or the virus season.

I have to say... "Say what?" If I am understanding this... by not getting out there, we diminish our antibodies the opportunity to create the immune system to fight off any and maybe all infec-

When I asked someone about this, they answered with a question, "Do you get a flu shot?" Well, what are they doing when they give you that shot? Infecting you with the flu so your system will build up an immunity with your antibodies. Well, how about that...?

So, looking into this...

The immune system is a host defense system comprising many biological structures and processes within an organism that protects against disease. To function properly, an immune system must detect a wide variety of agents, known as pathogens, from viruses to parasitic worms, and distinguish them from the organism's own healthy tissue. In many species, there are two major subsystems of the immune system: the innate immune system and the adaptive immune system. Both subsystems use humoral immunity and cell-mediated immunity to perform their functions.

The immune system; however, has multiple defense mechanisms have also evolved to recognize and neutralize pathogens. The immune system in the form of enzymes protect us against bacteriophage infections. Adaptive (or acquired) immunity creates immunological memory after an initial response to a specific pathogen, leading to an enhanced response to subsequent encounters with that same pathogen. This process of acquired immunity is the basis of vaccination.

Being in isolation can compromise one's immune system, and those individuals can be at risk of getting sick easier because their immunes system has been deprived of environmental contaminants that may be there for the immune system and antibodies to work with. This sounds strange but it is to the point.

An example that was brought up was when the settlers gave blankets to the Indians that was infected with smallpox. It has been speculated that since they were alienated from this disease their immune system could not fight this off. It has been said that over 600,000 Indians died of smallpox. Although, trying to confirm all of this history is still up for speculation.

Whereas the doctors from the associations seem to be claiming that those that go into isolation are doing nothing more than extending the virus issues which creates hardships because of the extended life of the issue regarding to the virus.

The Association of Doctors conflict with the government's analysis and recommendations to "Stay Home" as a resolution to the virus issue. They revert back to "herding" where life as normal would be the right approach as this would shorten the life span of the virus issue and/or virus season.

So, this is what we have to deal with. Not sure who to believe here, the government and the government medical experts or the various associations representing the doctors and/or physicians across the nation and around the world.

L.A. County WDACS Awards $500,000 to 59 Businesses and Organizations, Saving 311 Jobs

LOSANGELES COUNTY-

The Los Angeles County Department of Workforce Development, Aging and Community Services (WDACS) launched the Los Angeles County Employer Assistance Grant Fund to provide grants up to $10,000 to local businesses to help support them through the COVID-19 pandemic. Utilizing funding provided by Gov. Gavin Newsom and the State Employment Development Department (EDD), and in partnership with the Robert's Enterprise Development Fund (REDF), WDACS has completed awarding $500,000 to local businesses in this first-of-itskind program in the State of California.

The Los Angeles County Employer Assistance Grant Fund was awarded to 59 entities ranging from local small businesses, nonprofits, and social enterprises impacted by the coronavirus pandemic. 39 of the businesses receiving awards are minority-, women-, and/or Veteran-owned. A wide range of industries were represented, including Hospitality, Travel, Entertainment, Professional Services, Education, Tech, Legal, Environment, Healthcare and Non-profits. Businesses receiving awards were located throughout all five Supervisorial Districts in the County of Los Angeles.

Grant recipients received up to $10,000, allowing businesses to remain open, enabling employers to retain workers and to continue to provide valuable services to their local communities and to vulnerable populations. This investment in LA County's small business community has averted an average of five layoffs per organization, for a total number of 311 jobs saved. As a result of the infusion of funding provided by the Employer Assistance Grant Fund, it is anticipated that total amount of revenue retained among all the awardees is nearly $1.5 million.

"The Employer Assistance Grant Program in LA County has helped our small businesses during this time of economic uncertainty," said Supervisor Kathryn Barger. "Small business is the backbone of our economy and these grants helped in a concrete way, highlighting our County's commitment to economic resiliency and recovery."

"I fully recognize that our local businesses, nonprofits, and social enterprises are the backbone of our regional economy," said Los Angeles County Supervisor and Chair Pro Tem Hilda L. Solis. "This program helped 12 small businesses in the First District receive nearly $100,000 in grant funding, which avoided 58 potential layoffs. I will do all I can to ensure that our small businesses in underserved areas get the support they need and deserve to get through this crisis."

"COVID-19 has been especially hard on our small businesses," said Otto Solórzano, Acting Director of WDACS. "To help, WDACS has responded quickly by launching this innovative program to provide funding where it could do the most good. Our team is working tirelessly to bring other resources and supportive services to employers and workers who are struggling, and the Employer Assistance Grant Fund was just the start."

"REDF is proud to partner with the County of Los Angeles to quickly distribute funds so that social enterprises and other small businesses emerge from the COVID-19 crisis strong," said Carla Javits, President and CEO of REDF. "Social enterprise businesses – those that combine profit and purpose – are valuable assets to our communities addressing some of society's greatest challenges. As the economy reopens, the jobs, supportive services, and training that employment social enterprises provide will be in even higher demand by people whose experiences with homelessness and the criminal justice system not only make it difficult to access employment, but have left them vulnerable to the pandemic."

Businesses seeking resources and services to avoid closure or layoffs may contact WDACS by visiting workforce.lacounty.gov emailing bizdev@wdacs.lacounty.gov.

Just The Facts As I See Them

Over seven weeks ago our Washington policy makers made a collective decision to shut down all but extremely essential parts of the economy (to contain the spread of China's COVID-19). The USA's economy took a serious body blow as a result. As one bleak economic report follows another, I prefer to interpret the flood of bad news by not just assessing the damage, but also by anticipating Wall Street's expectations for recovery. It may be appropriate to start thinking about slowly heading toward that recovery. Most states have begun lifting (or at least started scheduling future lifting) of original lockdown restrictions. Partially reopened is, of course, better than fully locked down (especially from an economic perspective). However, our economy is still restricted domestically and globally to an extent that will likely result in the worst short-term economic performance in decades (despite government stimulus).

Nevertheless, Americans will now get out and about more, at their own pace. However, there is no doubt that millions of Americans are now afraid, and worried about almost everybody. Tension can be seen everywhere. In Washington President Trump decided to stop holding daily press briefings because many in the fake news media sensationalized almost everything he tried to communicate. (I don't think any of us would like to be constantly mis-quoted, or have our wording taken out of context.)

Meanwhile, state and local politicians with unpopular messages or unreasonable restrictions are being ignored. Governor Gavin Newsom learned this recently when Californians violated his restrictions and flocked to beaches during a recent heat wave. Such defiance is spreading. Americans do not like to be told what to do, or where they can go, especially when it makes NO sense to them! Hopefully state restrictions will continue to be relaxed. The faster Americans are allowed to move back toward

What's up in the Economy?

Economic Analyst & Former Glendora Mayor

normal, the faster the U.S. economy can and will recover!

You may have noticed that some elected leaders have been fighting over anything and everything, aided and abetted by conflicting media "spin". One frustrating example was how members of both parties of Congress were impeding recently approved stimulus checks over whether or not they wanted President Trump's signature on those

Much more significant differences of opinions are being observed between state governors! The reluctance of some state leaders to support more normal lives (in their states) is detrimental to America's recovery (as well as to our freedom). Many "red" states are reopening faster than "blue" states. While each state may be unique, the political leadership differences appear to be extreme. Blaming anyone in Washington DC for your governor's unwillingness to protect your constitutional rights is a bit futile. Governors (often slowly) deciding how fast to open their respective states, or how unreasonable they might be about American freedoms, are damaging our Country. This is especially disheartening when "slow walking" a state's return toward normal appears to be political.

The economic recovery message from Chair Powell is clear: "Don't get your hopes too high. It's going to be a long climb." After seeing the Q1 GDP report and the March consumption numbers, many on Wall Street revised their Q2 consumption lower, but some anticipate a bigger rebound in Q3. The trough created by America's lockdown induced recession is likely coming in the next several weeks. That said, from Mr. Powell's guidance, interest rates should be very low for at least the next 3-5 years, and maybe longer than that. The best news may be that President Trump helped maximize the USA's economic accomplishments during his first three years in office; and, President Trump probably can orchestrate such as economic recovery again (assuming his re-election)!

Also, as the Wall Street Journal recently reported. Jay Powell has transformed the Fed. The Fed is not quite lending to everyone, but it is lending to an awful lot of people the FOMC would never have considered in the past, while buying Treasury and mortgage debt at a faster pace than in any of the first QE rounds. There was a time when it was considered bad form for a central bank to take the same risks regular banks take. Those days are long gone. Now, the Fed is lending to entities banks are prohibited from doing business with!

As for negative rates, suffice it to say "no one has yet offered rates negative". It would (without question) do economic damage by weakening the banking system and undermining money market mutual funds. Besides, Powell has repeatedly argued there is no need. The Fed can do, and is doing, plenty of things to support the economy in ways that actually help.

Teen Safety

Keeping teens safe on the road is a subject dear to my heart. I'm often asked what parents should look for in a car for their teen driver. Of course, a lot of teens dream of a fancy sports car but that certainly isn't the safe choice for young, inexperienced drivers. Teen drivers, between the ages of 16 to 19 are far more likely to have a crash than any other group. They tend to underestimate dangerous situations and they don't always react to them appropriately. It is hard for a mature, experienced driver to always make the right snap judgment when behind the wheel to avoid an accident. Everything happens way too fast. When you are brand new at driving it gets worse.

I always advise that before you pick a car based on price or looks think reliable and safety first, then choose the safest car you can afford to buy. Air bags, stability control and excellent tires are a good start. Large to mid-size cars are safer than small cars because they are heavier. 16 models with the highest crash rates included 11 small cars. I know it is natural to assume that a smaller car is easier to handle and many times the teens like them because they appear sportier, however they are not the saf-

You might also share with your teen that California traffic tickets are mighty expensive these days. For example, just rolling through a stop sign will get you a relatively inexpensive ticket but by the time you pay all the agencies involved it can cost you plenty!

When you narrow down your choice of vehicle, check out the crash test scores on Safercar.gov. Your Money - Ask Julia

How does COVID-19 affect getting goods from China? Is there still a trade war? Why don't we just manufacture more goods in America to reduce trade with China?

So many items that Americans have grown accustomed to buying are manufactured in China. The EPA (Environmental Protections Agency) has set stringent regulations on manufacturers in America. Americans expect higher wages than Chinese employees. As a result, numerous American companies have their goods manufactured in China. Americans have grown dependent on goods made in China, and China has grown dependent on the United States for certain products. Yes, there is still a trade war, with each country imposing tariffs (like taxes) on goods. Covid-19 and the trade war challenge those dependencies. Historically, there are those who become millionaires by capitalizing on investing in, or starting up, companies to supply consumers' wants and needs during similar 'war' or pandemic times. I'm employed, and save 20percent for the down-payment on a house AND pay my rent. My rent payment is close to what a house payment would be, and I really want to buy a house. I'm afraid of adjustable loans that's how people lose their home. I see that there are loans with a smaller down-payment, but then there's mortgage insurance. Is there any way for me to buy a home?

It is extremely hard to save. If you are serious about buying, you probably need to make a budget, look at it critically, and either eliminate some expenses or increase your income in order to increase your savings. To move from one rental to another, you'd have to save a couple months' worth of rent for the security deposit and first month's rent, right? Save up a couple more month's rent, and you might have enough for your down payment for a house or condo. Before you get too excited, there are also 'closing costs' which usually run several thousand dollars. Now, before you get discouraged, you might be able to get the seller to pay your closing costs, or get a gift (with no expectation of repayment) from a friend or relative. Although adjustable loans, they are not the ugly beasts they used to be, I do not recommend them at this time. There are ways to reduce or 'eliminate' mortgage insurance with many conventional loans. How is your credit report and scores? How much debt do you have in relationship to your income? (Use an online calculator to help determine your debt-to-income ratio. Try for 35percent, or less, debt-to-income Go online ratio.)

My banker said that I should only invest my 401k money into an annuity through the bank because other investment companies, like insurance companies, are not FDIC insured. Is that true?

Your banker needs to read his own bank's disclosure statement which clearly says that bank investments (including the one he/ she works for) are NOT FDIC insured. Although insurance company products (life insurance, long-term care insurance, fixed annuities, equity-indexed annuities, etc.) are not FDIC insured, they come under a set of regulations that, among other things, demand that each insurance company have enough assets to cover their issued products. As you can see, this can easily exceed the FDIC's limit. Caution: Less regulated Private Equity companies are buying up insurance companies. There may be some regulatory differences. Make sure you know the facts.

Keeping in Touch with Past, Current, and Potential Clients

To say we are in interesting times is an understatement to say the least. As I continually state creativity is the key to success as well as tenacity in moving forward. Business / Capitalism always finds a way and the economy is usually bet-

Having a good CRM (Customer Relationship Manage ment) is important to maintain your list of contacts and clients in order to nurture those relationships to insure that steady stream of work and project or simply to stay on their radar for when the time is right. Customer relationship management (CRM) is a technology for managing all your company's relationships and interactions with customers and potential customers. The goal is simple: Improve business relationships. A CRM system helps companies stay connected to customers, streamline processes, and improve profitability.

Potential Clients New projects are beneficial in many ways, they offer you the chance to work with new people and a wider exposure of your abilities and outreach. However, do not underestimate the value of current and past clients who might be willing to offer you regular projects that will keep your business ticking over time as well as valuable referrals. Marketing yourself can take up a lot of time. It can also be frustrating if you do your best to write wonderful proposals but are not getting any work. In a world that is getting more complicated by the day it is important to experiment with various communication outlets to get your message out.

A Happy Customer Is Your Best Marketer

A lot of business owners make the mistake of focusing on potential clients so much that they neglect their current and past clients. This can be a big mistake. Past clients who are happy are your best resources for word-of-mouth marketing and recommendations. Don't feel shy about asking them for a testimonial or reference in relation to your work. Develop a referral form (please see in our A&C educational section for a sample form) to ask for those valuable referrals, if you don't ask you won't receive.

Current Clients

In terms of current clients, you need to impress them with how professional and efficient you are. Producing your best work even under tight deadlines is what being a good product or service provider is all about. Communicate clearly, be friendly but respectful, and you could end up with regular clients who really appreciate what you do.

Past Clients

The Pareto principle says that 80% of your business will come from 20% of your customers. It is easier to convince someone of your value when they have already used your services (if you have done a good job), than to try to convince total strangers to give you a try.

Your Portfolio

When working with so many clients, it can be easy to forget to update your portfolio to show off your best work, but that will be exactly what prospective clients want to see. At your portfolio site, and tombstones, you should have all you contact information and links to your best examples of the work that you provide - such as articles, website design, problems solved, products delivered, and so forth. Each item should have a title, and a hyperlink to that item so they can see all you have to offer. Put this URL on all your marketing material.

Email Marketing

One of the easiest ways to keep in touch with past, present and future clients is to maintain email marketing lists. A service like AWeber.com Active Campaign, Autopilot, Hubspot, SendinBlue, ConvertKit, Omnisend, Rejoiner, allows you to create lists in your account, so vou should have no trouble being able to create three separate lists to nurture these different relationships.

For past and current clients, you could send out a newsletter once a month with some valuable niche-related content and any new services you might have added to your business, link to your portfolio.

Treat them like they are special (which of course they are), and consider offering them discounts and coupons, or special service packages that bundle your offerings or even just an update with new and relevant information. Consider offering niche-related content for their site as well as your uploading and scheduling work.

For prospective customers, get them on your list first by offering them a useful free item related to your niche. It could be a checklist, cheat sheet or other item that shows you are something of an expert, and can help clients work smarter, not harder. Then send them more details about the services you provide.

By nurturing, your current and past clients as well as looking for new ones, you will get more business with less effort.

Student Spotlight: Anthony Steimle Achieves Top Score on the ACT

By Jenny Park

Anthony Steime is a Glendora High School Senior and 2020 graduate who achieved a 36, the highest possible score on the ACT. Less that one-half of 1% of all test takers achieve this score. He is also an Eagle Scout, plays the violin, and is the captain of the varsity swim team. Anthony also took 15 AP courses at GHS with a top score of 5 on each exam.

JP: How has high school changed since the mandated stay-at-home orders?

AS: Our grades cannot go down since 3rd quarter. There's not a whole lot of motivation. For seniors, everything has come to a halt. We're just getting ready for college.

JP: What did you do in terms of studying for the ACT to get a perfect score?

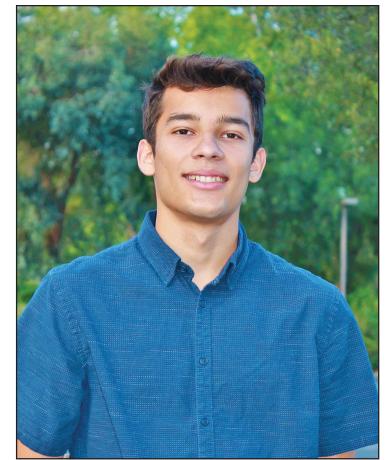

AS: Honestly, not a whole lot of studying. It's just about paying attention and applying what I learned in class. There's four sections on the ACT. There's math, science, reading, and writing. In terms of the math section, I didn't study a lot. The ACT goes up unto PreCalc. I had already taken the SAT subject test for Math, so I was prepared. The Science section I had to decipher experimental design and inference. Those are skills that you build over time. The reading and writing section were easier because I had skills that I built over time. The AP Language test that I took as a Junior helped me to pre-JP: What are your thoughts on the SAT and the ACT?

AS: I took the SAT twice and the ACT twice. If you show up on test day, and you do bad, that's not your maximum potential. The tests are built differently. The ACT has many more questions than the SAT. To get a perfect score, you can miss one or two. The SAT is a little more punishing for each. The testing strategies change depending on where you are trying to score. You can't move on to a different question once you have immersed yourself in the question. If you are stuck though, it is a good idea to come

JP: What subjects do you enjoy?

AS: I will say that I am a math person. I've been better at math more than English. I do enjoy English too. It's important when you are younger to build vocabu-

JP: What are your plans after high school? AS: I am going to the University of Pennsylvania. I got accepted into the Wharton School of Business. It's where Elon Musk went. It's a very good business school. I am doing a concentration on operations research. It's the math side of business. It's about how to make things efficient, hiring people, supply chain management, industrial management. That interested me. Operations research looks at how something exists and how to do it better. I applied to operations research because it's a little bit of science, math, business. It's also a people sub-

JP: Who or what motivated

AS: I've always been pretty driven. It sounds dumb, but I enjoy being successful. And I've always been driven to give it my all. I did that and I conquered it, so why can't I do more? My brother is at USC doing Business at Marshall. He's definitely motivated me to go to Penn specifically. I gravitate towards business because at the end of the day I said I like math, I enjoy writing. I like to think, whether it's math or science. I thought maybe of being an engineer. I just enjoy thinking and having my brain being stretched in some ways. I've himself in a room and studies for 5 hours. I'm a big extravert and like to socialize.

JP: What are your thoughts about the college admission's process?

AS: The ultimate irony is that you don't understand everything until you've done it. Even when I was applying, if I could do it over again, I would do this differently. Or I see that this really didn't matter much.

JP: What did you include in your personal statement?

AS: My personal statement was not about swim or orchestra. My personal statement was truly personal. You don't want to repeat yourself. You don't want to include your achievements because they've already read that somewhere else. The way I approached it was, that you want to present a new side of yourself in every opportunity you have. You never want someone glossing over your essay, thinking: "I've seen this essay a million times." You want to try to figure out how you can present a new aspect of yourself at every opportunity. The essay is not to show off your resume; your essay is to target the human side.

JP: What has your high school experience taught you?

AS: It just comes down to wanting to be successful. I haven't ever been handed anything. It's a mindset.

The closure of most college and university campuses in mid-March demanded a quick transition to online classes so students could continue their studies. In a recent report, the Public Policy Institute of California (PPIC) stated that community colleges could "...offer other (institutions) a lesson in effective practices for distance education." According to the PPIC, California community colleges have been leaders in delivering effective remote learning for more than four decades. In the past few years, they have also dramatically increased pass rates and narrowed success gaps between students taking online and inperson courses.

Online courses have also been shown to have some advantages over face-to-face learning. The ability to identify students' specific needs, create personalized learning, and provide instant feedback have all contributed to increased student success.

In spite of this, some problems with online education remain. Students without technology may not have access to online courses. Many community colleges are finding creative ways to help these students. Citrus College has introduced a new initiative-Providing Assistance for Student Success (PASS)-which is helping students with resources and support. Some of this support comes in the form of one-time grants for the purchase of technology, thus enabling students to continue their coursework

Baldwin Park Unified Student Chefs Receive C-CAP Culinary Scholarships

Baldwin Park High School senior Simon Luong won a full-tuition scholarship to the Institute of Culinary Education in Pasadena, worth more than $30,000, to pursue a diploma in baking and pastry.

BALDWIN PARK – Two Baldwin Park Unified student chefs are a step closer to realizing their dreams of becoming culinary artists or restaurant entrepreneurs after receiving Careers Through Culinary Arts Program (C-CAP) scholarships totaling nearly $40,000.

Baldwin Park High senior Simon Luong won a full-tuition scholarship to the prestigious Institute of Culinary Education in Pasadena worth more than $30,000, while Sierra Vista High senior Angela Chandara received three cash scholarships totaling $4,000 to go toward the post-secondary culinary program of her choice.

Luong will pursue a diploma in baking and pastry.

"Being able to participate in the C-CAP organization was an absolute honor, and I am beyond grateful for receiving this scholarship," Luong said. "I would like to thank my instructor, Chef Teresa Wong and my C-CAP coordinators. The beautiful thing about C-CAP is that they not only prepare you to be a chef, but also to expand your life experiences beyond the kitchen."

Chandara has embraced her culinary arts education because it has given her an opportunity to pursue a career path in cooking and emulate the TV chefs that have inspired her. Chandara is undecided on what school she will attend.

"I'm thankful to have received this scholarship because it is a once in a lifetime opportunity," Chandara said. "Participating in C-CAP was one of the best experiences that I ever had. It gave me a reason to get up in the morning. I wouldn't be here without the constant support and advice of Chef Wong."

The scholarships were awarded based on the results of a C-CAP preliminary cooking competition, held Feb. 7 at cation in Pasadena, where students demonstrated their knife skills and prepared two dishes: a French omelet and a cucumber salad.

Luong and Chandara advanced to the C-CAP Los Angeles regional final, which was to be held in April but was canceled due to the COVID-19 health crisis.

"Angela and Simon are both very self-confident and driven to success," BPUSD Chef Instructor Teresa Wong said. "Our students are fully immersed in the creation of French cooking, learning the classic sauces, the proper knife cuts and even culinary history. They are very well-prepared and great students."

Chandara and Luong practiced their recipes for weeks prior to the preliminaries, honing skills they learned in their Culinary Foundations class, mastering their timing, performing numerous taste tests and creating impressive garnishes that won over the judges. "C-CAP allows Baldwin Park students the opportunity to compete for culinary scholarships as well as participate in job shadows with renowned chefs in Southern California," BPUSD Culinary Arts instructor Jeff Palmer said. "I am proud that we can introduce our students to such a great organization. Thank you to the Board of Education for its support."

Baldwin Park Unified has a robust culinary arts program at both its comprehensive high schools, and has partnered with C-CAP, which provides career technical education support for underserved students.

"Congratulations to our exceptionally talented culinary arts students who continue to inspire," Superintendent Dr. Froilan Mendoza said. "Chefs Jeff and Teresa have done an outstanding job of preparing our students to compete and use their skills to pursue their goals and dream careers.
